4,500,000 Mouths

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), Sept. 25. German troops are fighting in the streets of Leningrad suburbs supported by swarms of bombers dropping the "heaviest types" of projectiles, the Germans reported today.

Ground troops were said to have pressed doggedly forward after smashing Russian defenders out of at least two villages in the outskirts.

Level flight and dive bombers attacked troop concentrations, bunkers and artillery positions with the "bloodiest losses" to the Russians, it was asserted. One heavy bomb was said to have hit the center of a Russian barracks.

Military quarters in Berlin said the report that the Germans had smashed their way so far forward showed "the situation of the encircled Soviet troops is becoming more and more hopeless."

The Germans said the Russian defense at Leningrad was weakening and declared the food situation in the city was bound to become critical. They made no prediction, however, on the possible length of Russian resistance there.

Rep. Doxey Named To Senate in Near Complete Returns

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 24 (AP).—Almost complete unofficial returns from Tuesday's special Democratic senatorial primary election indicated tonight that Representative Wall Doxey, of Holly Springs, was nominated to fill the unexpired term of the late Pat Harrison, of Mississippi. The nomination in this State is tantamount to election.

Doxey, 49, a member of the House since 1928, held a margin of 607 votes over Representative Ross Collins, of Meridian, 61-year-old veteran who has served continuously in the House since 1920. The unofficial count from all but ten of the State's 1675 precincts showed: Doxey, 59,232; Collins, 58,625.

An official canvass of the vote will start tomorrow. The winner will serve until January, 1943. Harrison, who died last June, had filled the seat for 23 years.

"Guns For Soldiers"

Few newspaper articles have ever created so much discussion as the "Guns For Soldiers" series, on the progress of the national defense program, which appeared on the front page of The Washington Post from Aug. 20 through Sept. 8. These articles have now been reprinted in booklet form. The booklets may be obtained from The Washington Post for 10c each.

G. Hall Roosevelt's Illness Disrupts Luncheon Plans

The White House luncheon for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor scheduled for 1 p. m. today was postponed late yesterday by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, due to the grave illness of the First Lady's brother, G. Hall Roosevelt.

Late last night, however, the State Department announced a second change of plans and stated that the President would receive the duke and duchess informally at the White House at noon.

The Duke of Windsor, The Post learned, also plans today to call on

Royal Itinerary

A detailed itinerary in Washington for the duke and duchess, beginning with their arrival this morning, follows:

7:05—Arrive Union Station. Departure from the train may not be until an hour later. They will go to the British Embassy.

10:45—Arrive at Commerce Building, Fifteenth and E Streets Northwest, to see Admiral Land.

Noon—Informal reception by President at White House.

1—Luncheon at British Embassy.

3:00—Arrive at Otis Building, 810 Eighteenth Street Northwest, to see James J. McEntee, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, in which the duke is deeply interested.

4:45—Arrive at National Press Club, Fourteenth and F Streets Northwest, for reception. Here, after a brief appearance, the duchess will cross the street to the Willard for a reception by the Women's National Press Club. The duke will join her there later.

6:10—Leave Willard for the British Embassy.

Tonight the Embassy will be the scene of a so-called "private" dinner for the pair. They have no appointments scheduled for tomorrow morning and are scheduled to leave Union Station at 1:25 in the afternoon.

Little Girl's Gift Rewarded With 'Thank You, Honey'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Aboard the Silver Meteor En Route to Washington, Sept. 24.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, principals in the most dramatic romance of modern times, were speeding toward Washington tonight.

The American-born duchess appeared to have recaptured her Southern accent, or at least, a Southern term of endearment. When a little girl came up to her at the Miami depot and presented a bouquet of roses, the former Wallis Warfield smiled and said, "Thank you, honey."

Honey, as thus used, is a word that is not picked up in Mayfair, or for that matter north of the Mason-Dixon Line.

D. C. Is Second Home Town

The duchess, naturally vivacious, seemed to be more animated than usual as she approached Washington. To her that city has always seemed like a second home town.

She began going there from Baltimore to visit her Aunt Bessie Merryman when she was a little girl in pigtails.

It was there, too, that she had a second "coming-out" party at the Marine Barracks.

And it was from Washington that she started out on her fateful trip to England, where a man gave up his role of King-Emperor of a quarter of the world's population to make her his wife.

This will be the duke's third visit to Washington. His first was in 1919, when Woodrow Wilson was ill in the White House. His second was in 1924. This visit was marked by two remarkable things. The duke, then a bachelor Prince of Wales, wore a blue shirt and thereby started a vogue, and President Coolidge, known as "Silent Cal," became a veritable chatterbox in an attempt to entertain his shy, ill-at-ease guest.

Duke Appears Youthful

The former King Edward VIII looks remarkably fit. Now 47, he could pass for a man 20 years younger. His eyes are vividly, almost startingly, blue. His hair is straw colored, and has been singed by the sun at Nassau.

Big Business Asked to Aid Work Spread

Odlum Requests Corporations Name Men to Help Speed Subcontracting Plan

Copyright by The Washington Post

Determined to blanket the Nation's small industrial plants with defense orders and subcontracts, Floyd B. Odlum, new director of the OPM Contracts Distribution Division, has asked each of the Nation's major defense contractors to appoint their "ablest executive" to head up the company's subcontracting activities and to work directly with him on the program, it was learned yesterday.

At the same time, it became known Odlum plans to expand the present 30 OPM field offices promoting subcontracting to 200, and to build up a group of 600 engineers and industrial experts in Washington and a field staff of several thousand men in order that all available productive facilities may be converted to defense work.

May Cost 30 Millions

It was disclosed that the program, the most ambitious and far reaching yet to be considered for this purpose by OPM officials, may involve the administrative expenditure of 30 million dollars.

Odlum, New York financier and utilities operator drafted by President Roosevelt two weeks ago to head the "spread the defense work" program, made his request for subcontracting liaison men from industry in letters dispatched yesterday to the 56 giant corporations which hold three-fourths of all defense orders.

Basing his appeal on the social and economic importance of keeping small business concerns alive and operating during the emergency, Odlum asked that subcontracting be extended as widely as possible so that scarce raw materials could be allocated to a large number of plants which might otherwise be forced to shut down.

Intense Efforts Needed

Concerned with the imminent problem of "priorities unemployment" and threatend collapse of thousands of small firms which have not to date been able to get defense work, Odlum is said to believe that only by intensive efforts of local Government offices in every industrial community in the country can the base of military production be broadened.

The 200 field offices he contemplates, it was said, would be staffed with engineers and industrial technicians, representatives of the OPM Labor Division and purchasing officers of the Army and Navy.

These individuals, working with an enlarged Washington staff, would analyze all requirements of the military services, the Maritime Commission and other Federal departments buying for domestic or foreign defense purposes, and attempt to fit them into the production facilities of factories now busy making civilian commodities but which face shutdowns by reason of prior call on raw materails by defense plants.

Meantime, Odlum announced yesterday the award of more than two million dollars of defense contracts to five aluminum utensil firms,

Morgenthau Urges 6% Profit Limit, Opposes Wage Ceiling; Move Started to Bar Aid to Reds

House Isolationists To Offer Amendment Banning Help Under New Lease-Lend Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House isolationists decided yesterday to fight for a limitation on the President's $5,985,000,000 aid bill barring lend-lease help for Russia.

The proposal, which the Administration anticipated and will oppose, was announced by Representative Stephen A. Day (Republican), of Illinois.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, a leader of the House isolationist bloc, said it was agreed Day would offer the amendment and that he would support it.

The effort to upset leadership efforts to maintain unrestricted the policy of aiding any nation opposing the Axis came as the House Appropriations deficiencies subcommittee heard confidential testimony on the Navy's role in the lend-lease program.

Navy Says It Is Ready

High naval officials assured subcommittee members that the Navy's growing battle strength has not been weakened by lend-lease assistance to Britain.

Committeemen said they were advised that the Navy is adequately prepared in every way to assume its duties in the North Atlantic and is "shipshape" for any test.

Day's disclosure that a House isolationist fight will be made to prohibit use of lend-lease materials by Russia followed weeks of unconfirmed reports that such a test was in the offing.

Committee leaders said they had been unable to discover the source of the reports but the move was expected. They claimed enough votes to defeat it.

While methods of aiding Russia outside the lend-lease machinery already have been inaugurated, Edward R. Stettinius, lend-lease administrator, advised the Appropriations Subcommittee on Tuesday against any such specific limitation.

Bloom Predicts Defeat

Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, meanwhile, recalled that Day has a concurrent resolution now pending before his committee barring lend-lease assistance to the Soviet. Bloom predicted its defeat if it is offered as a restriction on the new appropriation.

"I hold no brief for communism and that issue isn't at stake here," said Bloom. "But if any nation has checked the Axis, Russia has. Congress is committed to aid any nation whose defense is vital to the defense and security of the United States. That certainly means Russia as well as Britain."

Day told reporters he would ask acceptance of the amendment on the grounds that aid to Russia is not contemplated in the pending bill, but

Marine Strike Ends; Plane Tieup Feared

Seamen Return; Consolidated Dispute Certified to Board

An 11-day marine strike, which has tied up 25 merchant vessels in American harbors, was ended late yesterday by the A. F. of L. Seafarers' International Union as striking crews prepared to resume work pending outcome of negotiations before the National Mediation Board.

At the same time, the Secretary of Labor certified to the board a threatened strike authorized by an overwhelming majority of the 22,000 A. F. of L. machinists at the huge Consolidated Aircraft Co. plant in San Diego, Calif.

Board spokesmen said wires would probably be dispatched to the union and company officials today, setting a hearing date and asking that no strike or other aggravating action be taken in the interim. The strike, scheduled for next Monday, was voted by 96.8 per cent of the unionists, dispatches reported yesterday, after negotiations over a demand for a 10 cents an hour wage increase collapsed last week.

Holds 750 Million in Contracts

Consolidated holds 750 million dollars of contracts for land and sea bombing planes for this country, Great Britain and her allies.

Both company and union officials minimized the possibility of a strike materializing. A company spokesman said he believed mediation would settle the issues.

Cancellation of the ship strike followed S. I. U. local meetings yesterday and similar action by the organization's counterpart on the West Coast, the Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

John Hawk, secretary of the S. I. U., told newsmen that calling off the strike, which had involved 550 men and which threatened to leave 20,000 sailors idle under a general strike call, was "the sensible thing to do . . . as long as the Maritime Commission has stepped out."

The union had objected to the commission's requisitioning three of the strike-bound vessels, holding that the issue of the dispute—a demand for a $60 monthly bonus to crew members sailing to West Indian waters termed by the union a belligerent role—was a matter for negotiation between union and shipowners.

In other labor developments yesterday, 3500 C. I. O. workers continued a strike declared Tuesday against the Springfield (Ohio) plant of the International Harvester Co., building trucks for the Army. The union struck after negotiations for

Isolationist Groups' Offices Yield Matter Issued Congressmen

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Bales of unused postage-free envelopes, given Congressmen for their official mail, but found in the Washington offices of two isolationist groups, are part of the evidence in the District grand jury's investigation of suspected Nazi agents in this country.

The envelopes were taken by Department of Justice officials from the Make Europe Pay and Islands for War Debts Committees. Originally they were issued to:

Representative Stephen A. Day (Republican), of Illinois.

Representative Martin L. Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota.

The late Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

German Aid Charged

The fresh, unused envelopes—unaddressed but containing speeches of isolationist members of Congress—were part of a truckload of material given up by Prescott Dennett, secretary of the committees. Dennett surrendered the documents after the grand jury haled him before Justice Jesse C. Adkins of the District Court.

Special Assistant Attorney General William Power Maloney charged in open court that "known German agents" gave money to both the committees. Dennett was "flagrantly contumacious" and ought to be dealth with by the court, Maloney said, for failing to supply evidence sought by the grand jury.

Dennett was ordered both by Foreman John Gorrell and by a subpena to produce his account books, membership lists and correspondence files. He fialed to do so, but accepted Justice Adkins' suggestion that he make all his records available to the prosecutors.

When the possible contempt of court proceedings against Dennett were reopened yesterday, the prosecutors were busy going through the Dennett material. Maloney asked that action be postponed until the study was complete. Special Assistant Attorney General Edward J. Hickey indicated that they were through with both Dennett and the Columbia Press Service, 1430 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, of which

Treasury Secretary Calls It Fair Return; Declares It Would Avert Inflation

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday proposed limitation of profits during the emergency to 6 per cent on invested capital as a supplemental tax guard against inflation.

Before the House Banking Committee considering price control legislation, Morgenthau opposed a legislative ceiling on wages supported by Bernard M. Baruch but departed from a prepared statement to suggest the drastic profits curb.

The Treasury Secretary said he advanced the 6 per cent profits limitation "only as a rule of thumb—the experts will have to work out the details." He said he might have no opportunity to present the plan formally until next year, but would be "delighted" to testify before the Ways and Means Committee on a second tax bill in a year if the committee desires.

"Fair Profit"

He said 6 per cent was a "fair profit" for anyone during the present emergency, that it was not commensurate with sacrifices being made by "dollar-a-day" soldiers and sailors who have given up careers, that as the defense effort goes forward and prices rise further it will be realized "that something of this sort must be done."

"It is something I want to shoot at and I hope to get," said Morgenthau, whose recommendations for steeply graduated excess profits taxes, based solely on invested capital, were rejected by Congress in the last two tax bills.

Morgenthau, who testified past the dinner hour after day-long cross-examination of committee members, gave his full backing to Price Administrator Leon Henderson's bill for selective control of prices as against Baruch's plan for ceilings fixed as of a given day on all payments, including wages. He said it was vital that Congress pass Henderson's price bill promptly and not wait until prices have risen 75 per cent as they did before Congress moved in 1917.

At the White House the President also took a hand to speed passage of the measure, calling

Many Stocking Up To Beat Liquor Tax Rise Oct. 1

By the Associated Press

Thousands of Americans have been stocking up on liquor so heavily lately that the new higher liquor tax won't reach them for months to come.

The Treasury revealed yesterday that in August, for instance, the liquor industry withdrew 10,092,469 tax gallons of distilled spirits from warehouses. This was more than double the 4,847,067 gallons of the similar month last year. September figures may be even more startling.

The new tax law, effective October 1, increases the distilled spirits tax from $3 a gallon to $4 a gallon and levies a $1 floor tax on all liquor on hand in liquor-selling establishments on October 1. The new rates are expected to mean an increase of at least 25 cents a quart on bottle goods purchased by consumers.

Liquor production in August was 9,881,044 gallons, about 3,000,000 more than in the similar month last year, but this increase is for another reason. Many distilleries are getting ready to turn their plants over to making pure grain alcohol for various defense needs, and are piling up whisky stocks. They can get no tax advantage out of this building up of inventories.

Orphans of Defense

Furniture Makers Find Priorities a Bed of Thorns

This is the third of a series of articles on industrial centers which are threatened with depression in the midst of a booming economy because their raw materials are being diverted to defense manufactures.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Jamestown, N. Y., Sept. 24.—The hard-headed businessmen who run this city's factories are not given to quoting Poor Richard all the time. But in the back of their minds is one phrase.

"For want of a nail——"

Jamestown's wanting nail is a few tons—a trifling fraction of the Nation's production—of copper, zinc and steel. Fabricated into small ornaments, drawer handles, bed casters, locks and hinges, they spell the difference between sticks of wood and high-quality furniture.

Set down below the level of the rest of the city, studding the 9-mile "industrial valley" along the little Chadakoin River that winds through Jamestown and empties Chautauqua Lake into the Allegheny, are no less than 37 furniture and upholstery plants. They employ more than 3000 men, or over one-fourth of the factory workers here.

Their executives and trade association declare they are "destitute" of the hardware without which chairs and beds and tables simply cannot be sold.

One manufacturer reports he has 750 finished bedroom suites that cannot be shipped, through lack of metal fixtures. As of two or three months ago, factories began slowing up, laying off a few men. More layoffs, serious layoffs, are in prospect. Word has come that after the first of next year no hardware can be supplied without priority ratings.

"Quality" furniture is not a defense item. Priority ratings are not granted for it.

The OPM is seriously concerned about the city's plight. It has listed Jamestown in the first half dozen cities to be surveyed as potential victims of priorities unemployment.

So far, however, the OPM has been mainly worried about the effect of priorities in taking away steel from a different Jamestown industrial segment—the factories

Get Breakfast for Husband, Save Accidents, Wives Urged

Copyright by New York Times

Cleveland, Sept. 24.—Wives can help the defense program by getting their husbands' breakfasts and being generally sympathetic, a safety expert declared today.

Home conditions were responsible for many industrial accidents that cost the defense program 41,912,000 man days of work last year, W. T. Cameron, safety advisor to the United States Labor Department, told the Ohio State Safety Conference.

"Sometimes a man got careless because his wife got up too late to give him breakfast," Cameron said. "Many accidents were caused by lack of sleep, hangovers, intoxication, domestic quarrels and financial worries directly due to home conditions.

"In times like these there is more money around, more drinking and night clubbing, which in turn leads to a careless and reckless feeling which causes accidents.

"It is up to women to be as sympathetic and as good an influence on their husbands now as possible."

Cameron said 18,100 persons were killed and 89,600 permanently injured in industrial accidents last year, "when the defense program couldn't afford to lose a single man."

Air Force Chief Is Dismissed In Argentina After Putsch

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Sept. 24.—The head of the Argentine air force was reported relieved of his command tonight in the midst of a growing dispute between Acting President Ramon Castillo and the Chamber of Deputies over responsibility for a foiled uprising among army aviation officers.

Unconfirmed reports said Gen. Angel M. Zuloaga, the air force commander, had been confined to his home, but the news agency Andi, in reporting his dismissal, said he had asked for it himself.

Zuloaga was quoted as saying he felt he could no longer count on the support of army officials.

Andi's informant said the general had not admitted complicity in any plot, but had considered himself offended by the army's attitude.

Acting President Dr. Ramon Castillo attributed the foiled uprising to radical party members, nationalists "and others," and a short time later the radicals made a political stab at the president in the chamber of deputies.

The radicals, dominant in the chamber, refused to approve a 110-million-dollar United States loan, on the ground that its acceptance had been offered to the house too hastily.

The radicals thus threatened the President's economic rehabilitation

New Murmansk Attack Repulsed

War Sidelights

Red Troops Rush to Face Japan's Forces

London, Sept. 24.—"Trainload after trainload" of Soviet troops are being rushed to the Siberian and Outer Mongolian borders facing the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo, a Reuters dispatch from Shanghai said tonight, quoting nine foreign school teachers who arrived in the Chinese city.

The teachers, including one American, had traveled from Turkey through European Russia, Siberia and China. While riding along the Trans-Siberian Railway they said, according to Reuters, they saw successive trainloads of reinforcements bound for the Manchukuoan border along which Japan has been reported massing huge forces.

The Daily Express meanwhile quoted the French radio at Algiers as saying 20 warships of Russia's Arctic fleet, sailing along the topmost rim of Eurasia on the Soviet-developed northern sea route, had arrived at Vladivostok to reinforce the Red Far Eastern fleet.

Mission in Moscow

Blast Kills Hundreds

London, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—The British press association tonight quoted the Moscow radio as saying "hundreds" of German workers had been killed or wounded in a "tremendous explosion at a Czecho-Slovak munitions works." The dispatch said 902 persons were hospitalized.

(The Skoda plant in former Czecho-Slovakia is one of the largest of its kind in the world. Reports have reached London of sabotage and other subversive activity in Czecho-Slovak territory.)

More British Tanks

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 24.—Progress made in Britain's "tanks for Russia week" indicates that the total output will exceed by 50 per cent that of the corresponding period last month, Ministry of supply reports today showed where two tanks were rolling off the assembly lines three are now moving.

Turks Flee Village

Ankara, Sept. 23 (delayed) (U.P.).—Reliable sources reported tonight, amid growing indications of warlike preparations in Bulgaria, that authorities there had evacuated the Turkish population from a small village adjacent to a military airdrome near the Turkish frontier.

Other sources reported that Bulgaria was moving troops northward toward the Danube in great numbers.

Leningrad Defenders Beat Back Fresh German Onslaughts

Moscow (Thursday), Sept. 25.—Soviet troops smashed a new German offensive against the far northern ice-free port of Murmansk and fought back stubbornly along the whole front, the Russians said today.

Dispatches from the northern front to the official military organ Red Star said Murmansk, one of the most important harbors in European Russia, was still in Soviet hands.

The early Thursday communique said fighting continued along the entire front and reported 75 German planes shot down for a loss of 25 Red aircraft Tuesday. Soviet patrol boats were said to have sunk a German transport in the Gulf of Finland.

Besides announcing failure of the Nazi campaign to seal all of Russia's European gateways to aid from abroad, Red Star said defenders of Leningrad had beaten the Germans farther back by recapture of a position on the city's approaches. Nazi attempts to retake the position were said to have been broken.

Moreover, military informants reported the Red counteroffensive at the center still unchecked, and said that far to the south about Odessa attacking units of two Rumanian infantry divisions had again been driven back in wild disorder.

Two Regiments Routed

Two German regiments were reported destroyed by Marshal Timoshenko's forces on the eastern bank of the Upper Dvina, some 200 miles due west of Moscow. These regiments, said to be the 233rd and 235th, were reported routed in a four-day conflict, leaving more than 2500 dead on the battlefield.

In the lower Ukraine, heavy and inconclusive fighting was reported during the day before the gateway to the Crimea.

It was declared that strongly fortified Soviet position near Kherson, a town on the Dnieper River near the Black Sea and far to the west of the most extended lines claimed by the Germans, were breasting violent German assaults.

At one point, it was acknowledged that the Germans had momentarily broken through, but it was added that after Soviet reinforcements had been brought up the invaders were thrown back with losses of 1500 in killed alone.

As to the area protecting the Industrial Donets River Basin, where the southern Russian armies were reorganizing in an attempt to hold the strongest of all the Nazi offensives, there was frankly expressed Russian concern. Beyond the Donets lie the bases from which the Germans might seek to spring upon the Caucasian oil fields and the Allied supply route through Iran (Persia).

(It was reported from Iran that a major part of the five Russian divisions in the northern section of that country were being withdrawn immediately to support the defense against the southern German rush.)

(Offcial word came from London that the British Royal Air Force was in action on the Russian front and that a single squadron in its first engagement knocked down seven German planes with the loss of only one British fighter.

(This squadron was part of a complete British wing rushed to the Eastern Front.)

The President's Day

By International News Service

ALL QUIET: After rising at his usual time yesterday, breakfasting and huddling with his keymen, the President went over to his office and faced a dull, quiet day, much paper work, odds and ends. Along with the quiet over the White House hovered worry over the critical condition of G. Hall Roosevelt, all social activities were cut and business was less than usual.

FLY IN THE RADIO: First appointment brought J. Lawrence Fly, lately famous for his blast at radio via the FCC. He discussed his own game and its part in the defense effort with the President; walked out in 15 minutes flat.

TUNNEL FOR HOUSTON: Congressman Albert Thomas, of Texas, came in to ask for a tunnel under the Houston ship channel but agreed with the President that this was, perhaps, not exactly the time for such extras. As the tunnel was quickly disposed of, the President and the Congressman spent the rest of his allotted 15 minutes on speeding up the defense program.

QUICK CLEAN UP: Representative Henry B. Stegall, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, handling the price-control hearings in general, and Leon Henderson in particular, came to tell the President what he wanted to hear—that the hearings could be cleaned up next week and a price-control bill sent on its way. Mr. Roosevelt nodded. Thought that was fine.

OUTSIDE INSIDE: Charles Taussig, molasses king and one of the inside New Dealers who remains outside governmental jobs, dropped around to chat with the President as he frequently does.

STATE LUNCH: Secretary Hull arrived for the express purpose of lunching with the President and getting his views on what he would like to ask for in revising the neutrality act. Well over an hour later Hull went back to the State Department and the President back to conducting business by phone and memorandum, signing letters, dictating more.

War Games Enter 2d Phase Amid Rain and Winds

With the Third Army in Louisiana, Sept. 24 (AP).—Soldiers, bedeviled by rain and winds of a hurricane's fringe, started the second installment of the great Louisiana training war at a fashionable hour—noon—today.

All planes of the Third Air Task Force, approximately 400, have come through heavy rains and winds—as high as 40 miles per hour—without damage at their bases. However, air activity was off for the first day because runways and fields were soaked.

Each side has an armored division—the sock for a lightning war—in the problem.

Wavell Flies Back to Front After Secret Talks in London

By the United Press

London, Sept. 24.—Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander of the British Indian army, was revealed today to have been in London for secret conferences believed to have considered the possibility of sending British troops to Russia and the imminence of a new outbreak of war on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier.

Recalling Wavell's reputation for taking the offensive, observers believed he had argued in favor of moving some of his troops into Russia, at least into the Caucasus, but other sources said the question arose as to whether Wavell's army was well enough equipped to fight the Germans.

Wavell conferred with Prime Minister Churchill, Sir John Dill, chief of the imperial general staff, cabinet members and others, and he has now returned to his command by airplane, it was revealed.

A full scale campaign is expected to break out soon on the Egyptian-Libyan border. One of the biggest questions relating to the possible intervention of Wavell's troops in the Russian war thus becomes that of supply. Whether Lieut. Gen. C. J. E. Auchinleck's Middle Eastern army and Wavell's Indian army are well enough equipped to take the offensive at the same time, or whether one of them must remain on the defensive, is the question. A large part of the reinforcements of men and materials moving into the Middle East the past summer is known to have gone to the Egyptian front.

Growing fears that the Germans would soon reach the Caucasus, with its rich oil sources, dominated British reaction to events on the eastern front.

The next big battle is expected to be fought before Kharkov, where Marshal Budyenny was said to be consolidating his lines using troops who escaped from the Kiev encirclement and reserves.

Military experts here believe that if the Germans break through the Kharkov line they must surge on to the Don and Volga Rivers, for want of a convenient stopping place. By following the Volga down to the Caspian Sea, the Germans would cut off the Caucasus from the rest of Russia.

3015 Signed Up For the Red Cross Roll Call in 2 Days

District Red Cross Roll Call officials last night counted a total of 3015 members up to Tuesday night, the end of the second day of the campaign.

Leading all groups was the governmental unit with a total membership of 1316. The residential unit was reported to be far ahead of last year at the same time with an enrollment total of 365.

In order to make a direct appeal to Washington housewives Mrs. E. G. Montgomery and Mrs. N. A. Burnell, of the residential unit, will speak on Station WINX tomorrow at 11:15 a. m.

Mrs. Joseph Davies, honorary chairman of the residential committee, will be hostess at a tea at her home, 1801 Foxhall Road Northwest, to members of the committee next Tuesday afternoon.

52 British Boys Train in Arizona

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 24.—Prepared to take 20 weeks of intensive training to qualify them for Royal Air Force duty, 52 young Britishers arrived here tonight. They joined 150 others sent previously to Falcon Field near here.

Group Capt. D. V. Carnegie, director of British training in the United States, stopped here today en route to headquarters in Washington, D. C., to inspect the new field.

Common Control Of Papers, Radio Held Public Good

By the Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission was told yesterday that common control of two newspapers and three radio stations in Iowa had resulted in superior service to the public.

Luther Hill, general manager of the Iowa Broadcasting Company, subsidiary of the Register & Tribune Publishing Co. of Des Moines, made the assertion during questioning by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven.

The Iowa Broadcasting Company operates Stations KSO and KRNT at Des Moines and WMT at Cedar Rapids. Gardner Cowles, sr., heads the newspaper company and Gardner Cowles, jr., the broadcasting firm. Hill said the Cowles family owned a majority of the stock of the broadcasting company and of another company which operates Station WNAX at Yankton, S. Dak.

Hill was asked by Donald Harris, commission attorney, about the relative values of radio and newspaper advertising.

"My opinion is that if one was balanced against the other they would coincide fairly equally," he replied. "There is not much difference in dollar value."

Windsors' Train Speeds Toward D. C.

at West Palm Beach, Windsor was invited to operate the Diesel-run locomotive. This meant climbing into the cabin. The Duke clambered up with the agility of a sailor.

In a sartorial sense the duke appears to have slipped badly. Today, for example, he wore the same outfit he had on yesterday—a double-breasted white beach suit. Today it could hardly be called white.

Arthur Fletcher, the duke's red-headed valet, could hardly have been happy.

Uses Military Salute

The duke has one habit that has been his ever since he went to the front in France as a lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards in the World War. When he is leaving a crowd he raises his hand in a careless military salute.

When somebody is talking to him, the duke really 'bends an ear.' He turns and points his ear toward the talker's voice.

When the duke addresses the duchess he usually calls her "Darling." Like the duke, the duchess does not come anywhere near to looking her age, which is 43.

Her eyes are a violet blue, and are her most striking feature. They are reminiscent of Al Jolson's old song, "She's Got a Pair of Eyes That Hypnotize, 'N' Everything."

Next most striking characteristic of the Baltimore-born duchess is her poise. It is magnificent. Everybody remarks on it. Every news photographer who ever looked at her through his "finder" has found her a delightful subject. She smiles easily and with her whole face.

The duke, one of the most photographed men in the world, is not so good a subject. Although he tries to cooperate with the photographers. He has a habit they say of ducking his head at the crucial moment.

Calls Duke "Davey"

The duchess, according to one source, calls the Duke "Davey." That's what the Windsor family always called him. David is one of his seven Christian names, the others being Edward, Albert, Christian, George, Andrew and Patrick.

Those who have been traveling with the royal couple, however, have yet to hear her call him by any of his Christian names. They say she addresses him as "Dear" or "My Dear."

Members of the entourage address the duke as "Your Royal Highness," however they don't overdo it. Having addressed him in that fashion once, they rarely use the words again in the course of the day.

The members of the entourage address the former Wallis Warfield simply as "Duchess". They don't overdo that either. Nobody it seems calls her "Wally." When the duchess boarded the train this morning she wore another outfit that appeared to have been moulded on her. It was a dark blue shantung ensemble, a red and white silk blouse, and wrist length white gloves. The white stitched cap or "Beannie" which she wore yesterday, had given away to a small blue and white hat.

Once she got aboard the train, the duchess doffed her hat and put on a turban.

Duchess Has Hearty Breakfast

For lunch today the duke had merely stewed fruit and a cup of tea. He always eats a light lunch. The duchess, however, had bacon and eggs, toast and salad and coffee.

The food was taken to the couple from the dining car to their private car.

Maj. Gray Phillips, the duke's comptroller and aide de camp, did his eating in the dining car. And so did Rene MacColl, the press officer; Miss Jean Drews, secretary to the duke and duchess; Sergt. Harry Holder, of Scotland Yard; Fletcher, the duke's valet, and Miss E. V. Fryth and Miss Marguerite Moulichon, the duchess' maids.

Miss Moulichon is French and it was necessary for Miss Fryth to order for her. The French woman seemed particularly anxious to get hold of some good "Fromage."

The three Cairn terriers, joint property of the duke and duchess eat only once a day. Their meal today came at 7 p. m. It consisted of a quart can of beef and biscuit with vegetables.

The Cairns spent the day in the drawing room of the private car. When the train stopped at Woldwood the duke took them for a walk on the station platform. The Cairns, it was learned, had a fight on the Pan American Airways stratoliner that brought the party from Nassau to Miami. The aggressor was said to be Detto. He lunged at Breezy and Pooky and the result was bedlam some 15,000 feet in the sky. The duke and duchess are inclined to be tolerant with Detto. They say he was run down by a taxicab in Paris and suffered two broken legs with the result that he has been morose ever since.

When the train reached Jacksonville today it was supposed to stop five minutes. Here, however, the duchess ran into an old friend and as a result the train had to be delayed 15 minutes. The friend, understood to be a school chum of the duchess, was Mrs. Malcolm Forston, wife of Commander Malcolm Forston, Director of Naval Intelligence for the Seventh Naval District. Later on the way to Savannah the duke began writing the talk he is to deliver at the National Press Club tomorrow afternoon. The train which has been on time except for the 15 minutes lost at Jacksonville is expected to arrive at Union Station in Washington at 7:05 on the dot.

For the benefit of the National Press Club, the Duke of Windsor has the same taste in drinks as the Duke of Kent. He likes gin and brought along his private stock from Nassau. Occasionally, however, the duke goes for brandy.

ices between New York and Nassau, capital of the Bahamas, the island paradise of which the duke is governor general.

Yesterday afternoon, the State Department made public a statement from the White House in which the scheduled luncheon was called off.

"The President and Mrs. Roosevelt have found it necessary to postpone the luncheon on Thursday to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor," a State Department announcement said.

"The President has written to the duke explaining the serious nature of the illness of Mrs. Roosevelt's brother, and that for several days she has been constantly at the hospital.

"The President and Mrs. Roosevelt," the statement added, "anticipate having the duke and duchess at lunch on their return from Canada."

G. Hall Roosevelt is seriously ill in Walter Reed Hospital.

The British Embassy solved the diplomatic problem of how to fill the lunchtime gap in the Windsors' schedule by announcing that they would lunch instead at the British Embassy.

Shipping Service Irregular

The duke's scheduled visit to Admiral Land, one of several calls on American officials that he has planned, is a matter of life and death to the British colony he administers.

Officials explained that since the start of the war there has been irregular shipping service between New York and Nassau, endangering the commerce of the island and placing its main industry, the tourist trade, in a precarious position.

For communication with the mainland the Bahamas must now rely on occasional visits from United Fruit liners from New York, winter season service by passing cruise ships, freight vessels from Miami and, of course, air lines.

Passenger Ships Needed

The greatest deficiency, it was said, is in the lack of adequate passenger vessels for the New York-Miami run.

Informed officials said that the duke is likely to ask Land to restore the equivalent of prewar shipping services, which were one Munson liner every fortnight and one Cunard steamship a week.

The duke, thus, will be acting as a royal-blooded ambassador for his tiny palm-studded "kingdom," a ducal lobbyist for the tourist trade of the Bahamas.

In this manner, he will be assuming once more the role of super-salesman for the empire which won him world attention more than a decade ago.

Business Asked to Aid Work Spread

among the first to be hit by "priorities unemployment." The largest contract, for $987,000, was awarded by the War Department to the Aluminum Goods Manufacturing Co., of Manitowoc, Wis. The community was the first to be certified to the War Department under a new procedure by which the OPM advises the military services that certain areas or industries are suffering severe unemployment through failure to obtain materials.

The companies to which the contracts were awarded will make aluminum canteens, canteen cups and meat cans, all part of the soldier's field equipment, where aluminum is specified to lighten the weight of the pack.

The awards coincided with sharp complaints from Capital Hill yesterday that small business enterprises had been discriminated against in the defense program.

Chairman James E. Murray, (Democrat), of Montana, of the Special Senate Small Business Committee, charged in a statement to the press that "big business dollar-a-year men" had taken control of the defense effort, and by showing "favoritism" for big business, had prevented smaller concerns from getting an "even break."

Big contracts now tied up with large concerns, which cannot be put into immediate production, should be split up among smaller companies, Murray said. This is "absolutely necessary," he decalared, "if the panic now in the offing is to be avoided."

Small plants are now in a "desperate situation" because of material shortages, he stated.

He added that a "story" is being

Hotze, Smith Woman Eager To End Killing

There is one woman in Washington who will have more than a passing interest in the initial visit of the Duchess of Windsor to the Nation's Capital today.

Edythe Scheffer told a Post reporter Tuesday night she was going to be "'all eyes" when the wife of the former King of England arrives. The reason for her unusual interest lies in the fact that she is a "ringer" for the former Wallis Warfield.

Mrs. Scheffer was only slightly aware of her resemblance to the duchess until she came to Washington four years ago grom Madison, Wisc., and friends began to tell her sh could easily pass for the duke's wife.

Mrs. Scheffer's interest, once aroused by her friend's comments, impelled her to keep a closer tab on the duchess' activities—her clothes, hobbies, and interests.

"The duchess has excellent taste in clothes," said Mrs. Scheffer, who walked into Woodward Lothrop's her first day here and walked off with a job selling and modeling in the Gown Shop. Her first job was assistant buyer at a large Milwaukee store, managing the college shop.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Mrs. Scheffer will celebrate her first wedding anniversary November 9. Her husband works in the Securities Division of the Treasury Department.

The Baltimorean's "double" thinks King Edward VIII made a great sacrifice when he gave up the throne of England for the woman he loved. "It was wonderful, and he must have weighed dis decision very thoughtfully," she said.

Her likeness to the former Baltimore debutante has caused her to be questioned and commented upon wherever she goes, in restraurants, theaters, public functions. Her husband smiles, nods his head patiently, and says, "'Yes, she does look like the duchess."

She lives with her husband in a modest apartment at 2000 Connecticut Avenue, furnished exquisitely with antiques. She shares the duchess' fondness for fine clothes, and likes horses and dogs.

Right now she is working as a secretary for a dentist, and she likes her job very much. Some day she hopes to write for a newspaper in the form of a personal diary.

Miss Hellman Calls Film Quiz 'A Disgrace'

By George W. Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

Lillian Hellman, who wrote the bitter drama, "The Little Foxes," displayed bitterness yesterday only when referring to the Congressional movie propaganda investigation.

Here to attend last night's premiere of the movie version of the hit play, Miss Hellman was enthusiastic about the celluloid portrayal on two counts: the "fine" performances of Bette Davis as the vicious Regina Giddens, and the fact the film version was entirely faithful to the stage portrayal, with the distortions that have sometimes occurred in Hollywood adaptations happily absent.

About the current Senatorial inquiry the blond, 36-year-old playwright declared: "It's a disgrace." If films only lately were expressing antipathy to Nazism they had started too late, she remarked.

New Play in Making

Miss Hellman incidentally revealed she is turning over in her mind the plot for a new play. This drama she said would deal with the Versailles Treaty as seen through the eyes of one of the underlings at the conference; not a President Wilson, Lloyd George, or Clemenceau.

This does not mean the new play is nearly ready for the footlights, however. Perhaps, she said, it will not be for several years.

The playwright spends years in turning out each of her productions. The least time she has ever spent on a play was for "The Watch on the Rhine." This took a year and a half, one year in perfecting the plot in her mind, and six months in the writing.

And she was "thinking about" the theme of "The Little Foxes," first vaguely, then concentratedly, for 10 years before the public saw it, she said.

In the interview in her suite at the Mayflower Hotel, Miss Hellman gave hint of a playwright's temperament only occasionally.

Walked Out on Bankhead

But she said frankly that after seeing a "terrible performance" by Tallulah Bankhead as Regina when "The Little Foxes" was running here at the National Theater, she had walked out in the middle of the show after first "going back stage and yelling and screaming for a half-hour . . . which didn't seem to do any good."

In spite of what must be considerable proceeds from her various plays and movie scenarios, Miss Hellman said she would have to "go back to work" soon.

Of late she has been living a farmer's life on her 140-acre farm near Pleasantville, N. Y. Relating one incident in this pastoral scene she said she was mystified the other day to see one of her three cows acting very peculiarly in the vicinity of her apple orchard.

Two veteriarians, summoned to the scene, explained matters. The cow, they said, had been eating apples, had been thoroughly drunk, and was suffering a sort of bovine hangover.

Boy, 2, Found Safe After Night in Wood

Special Dispatch to The Post

New Market, Va., Sept. 24.—A lone woodcutter making his way home at dusk in the foothills of Massanutten Mountain tonight found Edward Burroughs, 2½-year-old son of an Army officer, missing since Tuesday morning, after more than 100 men had abandoned a 30-hour search.

The mountaineer, Cecil Bynacker, found the child sitting on a rock sobbing. He was about a mile from his home at the foot of the mountain and in an area searched by men from CCC Camp Roosevelt and a party of local men and boys led by Shenandoah County authorities.

The child was taken to the office of a New Market physician, who said Edward was in perfect health, with the exception of a few scratches. The child was clad only in a blue jumper and short pants. He had on no socks or shoes.

One of the first things the child asked for was an ice cream cone. He said he had spent the night sleeping and had spent most of today wandering in the area close to his home.

The child, the son of Lieut. Sherman Burroughs, who was called from training with the Twenty-ninth Division at the A. P. Hill Military Reservation in Caroline County to assist in the search, was last seen playing in the yard of his home off Route 211 1 mile east of New Market.

The search began early Tuesday afternoon under the direction of Chief of Police Jesse Funkhouser, of New Market and continued all night, the men combing the mountain slopes with the aid of flashlights and lanterns. Early today 70 men from Camp Roosevelt joined the hunt and systematically covered an area of approximately 6 miles in the vicinity of the home.

A part of the child's clothing was found in brush at the outset of the search over the rough terrain but nothing further was discovered and the search was abandoned, at least temporarily, late this afternoon.

Borders Discusses Rent Units' Duties

Karl Borders, chief of the rent section, Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, last night declared that the first duty of a local rent investigating committee is to determine the date on which a fair rent can be considered.

Borders spoke before the Arlington County (Va.) Nonpartisan League in the Lyon Park Community House, and described the duties and problems of his division.

In Washington, representatives of 20,000 striking anthractie coal miners, rebelling against increased dues and assessments levied by the C. I. O. United Mine Workers, met President John L. Lewis and aired their complaints, but left apparently without settling their revolt.

The deputation declined to make any formal statement on their meeting, but one member noted that the statement was to be issued on the conference only "if it had turned out satisfactorily."

One of the nine committeemen muttered, "No concessions. Lewis did all the talking as usual."

The committee returned to Pennsylvania to report to a mass meeting today.

Two Collieries Reopen

First break in the ranks of the insurgents came when two collieries in the Hazelton, Pa., area, center of the revolt, reopened despite the presence of a picket line. About 1400 men returned to work.

Earlier in the day, Lewis met with a Mediation Board panel on a dispute affecting "captive" soft coal mines of steel companies, railroads, etc., where the C. I. O. is seeking a closed shop similar to that prevailing throughout the rest of the Appalachian area in privately owned mines. A resumption of the meetings was scheduled for today.

In Pittsburgh, the A. F. of L. Building Trades Council called off its 14-day strike on construction of the five million dollar Curtiss Wright propeller plant in nearby Beaver, Pa., and ordered 200 craftsmen to return to work today. The strikers were involved in a jurisdictional dispute between the A. F. of L., the Duquesne Light Co., and an independent Utility Workers Union o2v2e2r the installation of transformer equipment.

A two-day strike of 600 C. I. O. steel workers against the Lukenweld, Nnc., plant at Coatsville, Pa., was ended. Terms of the settlement were not disclosed.

Also settled here was a five-month dispute between C. I. O. auto workers and the Marlin-Rockwell Co., at Plainville, Conn., when company officials accepted Mediation Board recommendations on vacation bonus payments and on making wage increases retroactive. The 1225 unionists, striking since the weekend, were expected to ratify the contract agreed upon and to return to work immediately. The company manufactures ball bearings for plane engines.

Be Firm to Children, Pope Tells Newlyweds

Vatican City, Sept. 24 (AP).—Pope Pius advised 1,000 newlyweds in a public audience today to exert firm authority over their children, with kindness but without weakness.

He said parents should give an example in speaking and acting of respect toward God, the church and legitimate state authority.

Nazis in Leningrad Suburbs

[Soviet troops and others augmenting the city's normal 3,200,000 population bring the total to 4,500,000 persons compressed into the ever-narrowing encirclement, German military sources estimated. They said these people were being jammed into a concentrated target for German airplanes and artillery.

[DNB, the official news agency, said the Germans had captured a "largish" town before Leningrad after a house-to-house and street battle. Competent but unofficial sources said the town referred to was Peterhof, 18½ miles from the heart of Leningrad, on the Bay of Kronstadt. It had been believed that Germans pushing along the coast toward the Leningrad harbor district had taken Peterhof some time ago, but there had been no announcement of it. The closest point to Leningrad the Germans have claimed is Krassno-Jeselo, 12 miles south of the center of the city.

Land Approaches Cut

[A spokesman said all land approaches to Leningrad were cut off by the Germans, and that although the sea approach was still open, it was "risky." German bombers have been "lifting their sights" in night raids on the city, the spokesman said, and they have destroyed supply depots, intensifying the problem of feeding the trapped population.

[German dive bombers are making "rolling attacks" on the Leningrad heavy defenses while battleplanes and pursuit planes zoom low over the fighting lines, strafing the Russians with machine guns and cannons.]

One German infantry unit was said to have advanced until activity in part of the dock region was clearly visible through binoculars.

The dispatches said Leningrad's defenders still were throwing themselves upon the Germans in counter-attack after counterattack, but these were described as decreasing steadily in intensity.

D.N.B. declared "it is to be expected Leningrad and its population will suffer the fate of Warsaw."

Bombardment Forecast

The news service expressed the opinion bombardment of the city and bitter street-to-street fighting would be necessary because of Russian determination to make a last ditch stand.

Germans were told the mopping up of Soviet forces trapped east of Kiev was proceeding methodically, with the encircled Russians split into two tightly-held rings and reduced to impotence by chaotic disorganization.

The high command declared confidently that the trapped troops would be destroyed within a few days.

Dispatches dealt at length with widespread operations of the German air force, said to range from continued batterings of the Red army's defense ring around Leningrad and last night's renewed bombing of industries at Moscow to smashing blows of Kharkov in the Donets Basin.

German bombers scouted the Baltic Sea and Gulf of Finland for other Russian warships. The high command declared direct hits were scored on battleships and a destroyer off Kronstadt, guarding the sea approach to Leningrad.

German batteries were said to have silenced two warships which turned their guns in defense of Leningrad. Another Red warship was reported set afire two days ago at Oesel Island.

Other German sources said the old but heavily armed 23,606-ton battleship Marat was left sinking in the Gulf of Finland near where her sister ship, the Oktiabrskaya-Revolutia, was said to be still visible, partly submerged, after a bombing last week.

In operations far to the north German bombers reported disabling a large Russian power station along Kandalaksha Bay, off the White Sea, smashing a dam and spilling the water from a large reservoir.

[The Port of Archangel is located on the White Sea coast. Washington dispatches revealed this week that United States war shipments were moving across the Atlantic to Archangel and that Russians hoped to keep the port open all winter with icebreakers, although it normally is ice-bound from November to May.]

BROWN-FORMAN DISTILLERY CO., INC. at LOUISVILLE in KENTUCKY

Get BLUE and feel swell!

Throw back those shoulders, mister—the world is your oyster. Yes, sir—that's how happily these new Bond blues will boost your self esteem. To say nothing of the impression they'll make when you're anxious to put up a really good front. Notice we said new—forget those fuddy-duddy old navy shades. This Fall, let Bond show you blue with a dash of oxford grey to give it added character. Wear yours from the crack of dawn to curfew—it's one suit that perfectly fits into every scene with smooth assurance. If you've a yen for "something different"—something which fairly breathes conservative good taste—stop looking and head for Bond's.

Swell company on any trip—Bond's smoke-blue sharkskin. Holds its press, never looks travel-weary, delivers you fresh wherever big orders are signed.

So he's not the bank president—but he sure knows how to dress like one. That "sweet young thing" thinks so, too. His smoke-blue, by Bond, is rough tweed

"Soft lights and sweet music"—let's go. Smart lad, he's certainly sold himself to her Dad (and we've a hunch that Bond blue worsted didn't hurt his chances, either).

U.S. Hates Nazis Films Reflect It, Schenck Says

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Motion pictures portraying Nazi "brutality" reflect the opinion and sympathies of the American people, Senate investigators were told yesterday by Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc.

The film executive, taking the stand for the second day in the Senate subcommittee hearings on war propaganda charges against Hollywood, emphatically denied that Loew's or the motion picture industry as a whole had deliberately set out to inflame American opinion and force the country into war.

"We don't mould the public," Schenck said. "They mould us. Nothing we could do would make the Americans hate Hitler more than they already do."

When Senator D. Worth Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, suggested that such pictures as "Escape" and "The Mortal Storm" incite hatred of the whole German nation, while "the atrocities they portray are committed by only a handful of bestial men," Schenck replied:

"But that handful controls that country."

Films like the two mentioned by Clark, both M.-G.-M. (Loew's) products, merely "help people to understand a little better what they already know," Schenck said.

Asked by Clark if he had ever discussed with "British agents" the production of war propaganda pictures, the witness replied, "I have never met one."

Schenck said he had no knowledge of the plot of "The Mortal Storm" while the picture was in production, and that in the case of "Escape" he had recommended to his staff that they buy the screen rights as soon as he finished reading the book, because "it was a very good story and I wanted Loew's to get it before some other company did."

The witness was not questioned on any other M-G-M pictures.

Most of yesterday's hearing was taken up by a dispute over charges made before the subcommittee last week by Jimmy Fidler, Hollywood columnist, who asserted that motion picture companies had put pressure on both the radio and press to suppress his views, partly because of his opposition to alleged war propaganda films.

Fidler Called Liar

Fiddler had told the subcommittee that Howard Dietz, director of advertising and press relations for Loew's, had threatened the Nashville Banner with loss of M-G-M advertising if it did not suppress the Fidler column.

Dietz yesterday characterized Fidler as a "congenital liar."

An "overzealous" theater manager in Nashville, because he resented what the witness called a "vicious personal attack" on Norma Shearer in the Fidler column, did threaten the Banner with loss of advertising, Dietz acknowledged.

He added, however, that the theater manager had no authority over placing of advertiseing and that his threats had been repudiated by Dietz, in a conversation with a Banner representative shortly after the episode, which occurred in 1938. He told the subcommittee:

"I won't accuse Mr. Fidler of perjury, but I will say he is a congenital liar, and it would be going against his conscience to tell the truth."

When Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, asked if "M-G-M ever sought through threats to withdraw advertising or in any other way to censor the press," Dietz answered:

"No. I abhor any attempt to restrict the freedom of the press. I might add that many of us are opposed to this hearing as an attempt to restrict the freedom of expression of the screen."

Fidler had charged that a group of film executives reduced their advertising in the Los Angeles Times to the contract minimum after failing to persuade the newspaper to drop his column.

Dietz acknowledged that there were two M-G-M executives in the group that had "called on" Norman Chandler, editor of the Times, but that neither of them, in reporting on the conversation with Chandler, had said that Fidler's column came up for discussion. He added that he did not know whether M-G-M advertising in the Times had been increased or decreased since the interview with Chandler.

Clark Is Impatient

Senator Clark, chairman of the subcommittee, showed impatience at several points during Dietz's testimony, reminding the witness that Schenck, in stating that he knew nothing about the Los Angeles affair, had told the subcommittee Dietz "would tell us all about it."

Clark told Dietz that Fidler's testimony on the Los Angeles Times episode "still stands, since you can't contradict it."

"But I know Fiedler wasn't the chief subject of discussion at that meeting," Dietz replied. "He just thinks he was the focal point."

"But you can't prove that," Clark insisted.

"No, pinned down to it, I can't," the witness said.

Earlier yesterday, Schenck had denied that the Federal Government had exercised any pressure on distributors or exhibitors to obtain showings of the film "Land of Liberty," which an Idaho theater owner had declined to show because he thought it contained propaganda.

Schenck told the subcommittee that Maurice Saffie, Loew's branch manager at Seattle, through "overanxiety to do his job," had written Fulton Cook, the Idaho theater operator, that the Government was sharing in the profits from "Land of Liberty" and had requested the names of exhibitors who refused to show it.

Saffie, Schenck said, had no authority to make any such statement. "He was thinking properly but acting wrong," the witness continued.

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, who defended the film industry in testimony Tuesday, yesterday invited members of Congress to a screening of "Land of Liberty" in the National Archives Building auditorium tomorrow. It will be shown continuously from 2:15 to 6 p. m.

Senate Inquiry Fails to Bare Truth About Alice's Dress

By the United Press

They wrote another chapter here yesterday in that intimate mystery story entitled: "Did Alice Faye's new dress fall apart the first time she wore it?"

"It most certainly did," said Harry Brand, West Coast advertising representative of Twentieth Century-Fox.

"No! No! No!" insisted Jimmie Fiddler, radio commentator, whose wife is part owner of a Hollywood dress shop that sold the gown to Miss Faye.

Silence from Alice.

It has left somewhat confused members of the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee who are supposed to be investigating pro-war movie "propaganda" and not the durability of dresses that drape Alice's curves.

They'd like to forget the whole dress incident. But Senator Ernest W. McFarland (D-Ariz.), the only nonisolationist on the committee, won't let them.

"Humph! It looks like we've finally got down to the real issue," he twitted his colleagues.

It began this way:

Brand telegraphed the committee that Fidler once tried to get him to influence movie stars to buy gowns at Mrs. Fidler's shop. The beauteous Alice bought one, he said, ad it fell apart the first time she wore it.

In an aggrieved message to McFarland today, Fidled said 'taint so. He said Alice wore the gown to the premiere of her new picture, "Hollywood Cavalcade," and to a dinner afterward.

ALICE FAYE

"She was much in evidence at both places," he insisted.

Brand said the falling apart of Alice's dress caused her much humiliation and embarrassment.

Taint so, said Fidler, again. He said he was present at the premiere and the gown was praised by many.

Other stars buy gowns at the Fidler Dress Shop and why don't they fall apart? He asked.

This One's Really Just a Little Bitty Calf, Too—Texans Tell Us

If there is a freight car big and strong enough to haul the ornery critter half-way across the continent, Washington is going to get a genuine Texas longhorn.

Representative Wright Patman, of the Lone Star State, said so yesterday, beaming with pride as he discussed the impending gift with Dr. William M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park.

"Got a horn-spread of 8 feet," volunteered Joe Montague, nemesis of cattle rustlers, who accompanied Patman to the Zoo to discuss a likely exhibition pen.

"More than 8 feet," corrected Patman.

In its 50-year history, Washington's Zoo has never had a real longhorn steer. Once as numerous as buffalo, they are almost extinct today. Bronx Zoo in New York has one on show and there are two or three more in captivity in Texas and that is all.

The specimen which is due to reach the Capital in a couple of weeks is a 1200-pounder, roped a few days ago on the quarter-million acre ranch of Tom East, brother-in-law of Representative Richard M. Kleberg.

The setup, explained Patman, is for the big animal to be presented to the Zoo by East through the Texas State Society of Washington, of which Patman is president.

Getting the beast here, they admit, is the big problem. Doors of an ordinary freight car are six feet wide, they said. Since the horn-spread is more than eight feet and the longhorn has to be crated for shipment—"well, looks like they'll have to use a flat car," reckoned Head Keeper William H. Blackburne.

Spanish for the Texas longhorn is "ladino bravo." Translated freely, it means tough guy, or the equivalent.

"I only hope," mused Dr. Mann, "that he'll be content in a half-acre pen after being used to a quarter-million acre playground."

Morgenthau Calls for 6% Limit on Profits

Chairman Steagall of the Banking Committee.

"He asked for a price bill, and I told him he will get it," Steagall told reporters.

While he opposed wage ceilings, saying "labor is not a commodity, human beings are not property; and they should not be treated as such," Morgenthau said the price administrator should be given full authority over farm prices and favored "parity" for farmers rather than the 110 per cent of parity farm ceilings provided in the bill.

Restrictions on control of farm prices he termed "the major defect of the bill," and he said farmers would be the "worst sufferers" from inflation hastened by run-away farm prices.

"I strongly recommend that this inflexibility be removed—in the interest of the attack upon inflation, in the interest of the standard of living of our people and in the long-run interests of farmers as well."

Morgenthau presented the essence of his testimony at a morning session but came back after lunch to be questioned for hours on tax proposals, his stand against a wage ceiling, and his attitude on wage prices.

He said that labor statutes and mediation machinery now at hand, as well as Assistant C. I. O. Director Sidney Hillman's efforts toward voluntary area wage agreements, should meet the wage problem. But mainly he resisted committee efforts to commit him beyond the stand against wage ceilings made in his prepared statement.

Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, who supports the Baruch plan for a "universal ceiling" including wages, vainly sought to draw Morgenthau out on wages as a chief factor in purchasing power.

Morgenthau replied to Gore and others that he rested on his prepared statements on the pay of labor, which he declared, was not a commodity.

"That would have been a great contribution if Abraham Lincoln hadn't settled it in his emancipation proclamation," snapped Gore.

Later, Morgenthau protested close questioning by Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, on what the Secretary would do "if you were price administrator" to bring up low wages by fixing prices that would support a wage increase.

Morgenthau said that was covered by minimum wage laws. Patman said intra-state labor was untouched by the Wage-Hour Act. When Patman insisted on an answer Morgenthau said that, like the Texan, he would "like to see wherever possible" a 40-cent minimum for all labor.

But it was the Secretary's declaration for a 6-per-cent profits limitation, continuing but being more drastic than the Administration's earlier fight for an invested capital excess profits tax base, that held the committee in over-time session.

"If we are going to ask everybody else to be patriotic and make sacrifices, the owners of corporations will have to do likewise," said Morgenthau. "If a corporation earns 6 per cent on its capital, that ought to be enough."

When Representative Monroney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, asked him if he meant taxes "that will take all above 6 per cent of invested capital, the Secretary said:

"I made a sweeping statement, but you've got it."

In his prepared statement he said, "I feel very definitely that if we can, on the one hand, keep the cost of living from rising, and, on the other hand, impose adequate taxes on excessive profits, then we will have removed the major causes for demands for general wage increases."

He said Congress must prepare further to increase taxes, "we may have to extend the general controls over bank credits," nondefense spending must be curbed, and "it would be wise to extend the social security program to absorb purchasing power now."

Isolationists Meet

Day said he has conferred with Fish and others in the so-called non-interventionist bloc and that other tactical conferences will be held. The amendment would be germane as "a limitation on an appropriation," he added.

With House action on the bill still slated for the week after next, the deficiencies appropriations subcommittee called back Navy witnesses for further hearing this morning and this afternoon probably will hear shipping testimony from Chairman Land of the Maritime Commission.

A move, meanwhile, was under way in the subcommittee to meet part of the $5,985,000,000 lend-lease request by a grant of contractual authority. Based on conclusions that large portions of the program will not be completed, next year, advocates of this course said, nearly half of the production anticipated might be started in this manner without immediate appropriations.

Yesterday's witnesses on naval features of the program included Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships; Read Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, chief of the ordnance bureau, and Capt. DeWitt C. Ramsey, representing the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Subcommittee members said details of their testimony could not be disclosed because of its highly confidential nature. But Republican and Democratic members alike said it presented a "bright" picture of naval preparedness.

program and threw the chamber into an uproar.

The conservative national democrats, who hold a majority in the Senate, promptly walked out of the chamber and angrily said they would not return.

Both parties recently approved recommendations that Nazi undercover groups be smashed in Argentina, a move tacitly expressing disapproval of the activities of German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann.

One radical deputy last night declared on the floor that Acting President Castillo himself had "joined the totalitarian plotting."

The president minimized the seriousness of the nipped uprising and said there was no intention to declare a state of siege. He did not identify the "others" involved in the threat to the government, although a congressional committee has charged Nazi elements were conspiring in Argentina.

In widespread precautions against the suspected air-force coup the government ordered all military planes grounded until Saturday.

Roosevelt Will Ask U. S. Ships To Go toBritain

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt is planning a message to Congress on revision of the Neutrality Act that will ask permission for American ships to sail to the British Isles as well as authority to arm merchant vessels, qualified Administration quarters disclosed last night.

The neutrality law, which the President said Tuesday will have to be changed, requires him upon the outbreak of war to proclaim combat zones into which American merchant vessels may not travel. Complying with this legal requirement, the President shortly after the start of the war in September, 1939, defined as a combat area a large portion of the north Atlantic around the British Isles and Ireland. No vessel of American registry has been allowed there for more than two years.

Officials familiar with White House policy said that the President is just as anxious to wipe from the books this "combat zone" provision as to secure the right to arm merchant vessels.

Restrictions Obsolete

Now that the policy of "freedom of the seas" has been reaffirmed and is being enforced by shooting orders to the Navy, the Administration feels that "combat zone" restrictions on that freedom are obsolete and incompatible with the historic American view that the seas of the world should be a highway for the commerce of all nations—except, of course, "pirates."

The Government has had to resort to the expedient of transferring vessels to the flag of Panama in order to send any ships into the combat zone. The Pink Star, sunk last Friday near Iceland, was bound for the United Kingdom under the flag of Panama.

There are 125 American-controled ships that fly the Panamanian flag, 45 of them United States-owned. In addition, the "combat zone" provisions have been weakened to some extent by an opinion of Attorney General Biddle holding that American ships carrying arms and ammunition may visit numerous British ports, such as Singapore and Suez, that were not specifically forbidden by Presidential proclamation.

Zones "Meaningless"

Defined "combat zones" have further lost meaning, say officials, due to the start of Nazi unrestricted submarine warfare. A ship is just as much in danger in the South Atlantic or on the "American" side of Iceland, they say, as in English waters.

Another statement they make is that, now that we are committed to supplying seven billion dollars' worth of lend-lease goods and are preparing to authorize another six billion dollars for the same purpose, it would be foolish not to do our utmost to send our ships to "deliver the goods" all the way to England.

Some of the Neutrality Act can, and should be, salvaged, the Administration feels. The President is expected to ask for modification, but not outright repeal of the law.

Provisions worth saving, it is said, include those making special exceptions for Red Cross ships, regulating travel on belligerent ships, restricting loans by private citizens to belligerent governments, regulating the solicitation and collection of relief funds, granting special exemptions in case of an attack on another American republic, to prevent ships from ferrying war supplies to belligerent vessels offshore, prescribing conditions for the entry of submarines and armed merchantmen into our ports, setting up a licensing system for arms exports and forbidding unlawful use of the American flag at sea.

Money Ban May Go

Even some of these may be scrapped, such as the prohibitions on lending money to a country at war and the ban on travel on belligerent vessels, which has already been partially lifted for Americans in a hurry to return home from Great Britain.

Chairman Connally (Democrat), of Texas, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted yesterday that Congress, at the President's request, would open up the high seas of the world to American ships.

"The prohibition against American ships going into combat zones," said Connally, "was predicted on the theory that if they remained out of combat zones the Nazi submarines would not attack them or sink them. That belief has proven illusory."

Flag Association Inducts New Leader

America First Group Denies Anti-Semitism

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 24.—The America First Committee said in a statement tonight that "Col. Lindbergh and his fellow members of the America First Committee are not anti-Semitic," and charged that interventionists had injected the race issue "into the discussion of war or peace."

The statement was issued by the group's national committee, the policy making body, as a result of Lindbergh's speech in Des Moines, Iowa, on September 11, in which he said the "British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt Administration" were the three most important groups "which have been pressing this country toward war."

The statement issued by the committee follows:

"Ever since the nation-wide effort to keep America out of war began the interventionists have sought to hide the real issue by flinging false charges at the America First Committee and at every leader who has spoken out against our entry into the European conflict. The present attack on Col. Lindbergh is merely another case in point."

"Colonel Lindbergh and his fellow members of the America First Committee are not anti-Semitic. We deplore the injection of the race issue into the discussion of war or peace. It is the interventionists who have done this.

"America First, on the other hand, has invited men and women of every race, religion and national origin to join this committee, provided only that they are patriotic citizens who put the interest of their country ahead of any other nation. We repeat that invitation.

"At least 80 per cent of the American people oppose our entry into the war. The America First Committee has supplied to these millions of citizens a leadership which has thus far helped to avert disaster. Consequently, the aim of the war makers is to destroy the America First Committee.

"Behind a smoke screen of groundless charges, this Nation is being led to war in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

"There is but one real issue—the issue of war. From this issue we will not be diverted. We will carry on the fight until it is won."

Blast From Gov. Heil

Milwaukee, Sept. 24 (AP).—Gov. Julius P. Heil, a Republican, told the Milwaukee Junior Chamber of Commerce today that the American Ligion's National Convention was controlled by President Roosevelt. Gov. Heil, referring in general to resolutions adopted by the American Legion convention here last week, but without mentioning any resolution specifically, said:

"They were not the will of the American Legion. The great white father had all of his people here. There were plenty of payrollers here and they were controlled."

After the speech, Heil reiterated his statement, asserting "it's the truth and there is no reason to fear the truth." The Governor said he was not "attacking a single legionnaire."

Heil said that propaganda "is a bad influence" and added:

"You saw a lot of controlled propaganda here last week. You saw steamroller tactics."

Accord Set on Seizure Bill

By the Associated Press

A joint Senate-House conference committee agreed yesterday upon a compromise version of legislation authorizing the Government to seize certain property needed for defense.

Property seizure bills were approved by both chambers several months ago, and today's comoromise cleared the way for final Congressional action.

The compromise bill permits the President to determine the fair compensation for any property requisitioned, but permits persons whose property is taken to appeal to the Court of Claims or any district court for additional compensation.

As adjusted, the legislation also prevents the requisitioning of firearms used by individuals for their personal protection or for sport.

Nothing in the legislation, the compromise version said, would "impair or infringe in any manner the right of any individual to bear arms."

In addition, the President is prohibited from requisitioning any machinery "which is in actual use in connection with any operating factory or business and which is necessary to the operation of such factory or business."

G. H. Davis, Jr., Named Commonwealth Attorney

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—Circuit Judge J. R. H. Alexander has appointed George H. Davis, jr., Washington, Va., Commonwealth's Attorney of Rappahannock County to fill the unexpired term of the late William F. Moffett.

Vichy Strives To End Shootin Of Hostages

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Sept. 24.—Pierre Pucheu, minister of the interior, left for Paris today seeking a relaxation of the German hostage-reprisal system under which dozens of Frenchmen have been executed because of terroristic attacks on German soldiers.

Informed sources said Pucheu would seek German consent to a substitute plan whereby French authorities would assume responsibility for combatting "terrorism, sabotage and communism" in both zones.

At least 35 Frenchmen have been executed in the occupied area either as hostages or on espionage, sabotage and communism charges. More than 34,000 persons have been arrested in both zones for opposition to Marshal Petain's German collaboration regime.

Informants in Paris said just before midnight that rumors a state of seige had been declared there were unfounded.

Death for Aid to British Fliers

Vichy, Sept. 24 (INS).—Germany tonight warned the population of France that any men found to be helping enemy parachutists or airmen who make forced landings on French territory will be summarily executed and any women caught doing the same will be sent to concentration camps in the Reich.

On the other hand, men or women who help capture enemy parachutists or aviators will receive rewards of 10,000 francs or more.

Nazis Use Dive Bombers To Disperse Serb Guerrillas

Budapest, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—The newspaper Magyar Nemzets said tonight that 12,000 Serbian Cetnicis (revolutionaries) had attacked an unidentified Serb town, forcing the outnumbered German garrison to summon reinforcements.

The dispatch said dive bombers were sent to disperse the Serbian guerrillas.

The volunteer army of Gen. Mihan Nedic, the Serbian war premier, attacked the insurgents.

Fighting still was going on, the newspaper said, and Gen. Nedic had ordered out additional reinforcements.

One Cetnici band, the newspaper said, raided a village, disarming and kidnaping the small German garrison.

Bishop Says Russian Tie Is Temporary

"Subversive interests" are using Constitution-guaranteed liberties to establish a new form of government that will deny the liberties they abuse, Bishop Adna Wright Leonard warned here yesterday.

The prelate, resident bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist Church, chairman of the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains, and chairman of the Methodist Board of Education, addressed the opening convocation at American University.

Contending that the comradeship of democracies with the Russian dictatorship is only a temporary affair, Bishop Leonard said it does not mean that "the democracies have surrendered to the philosophy of Lenin, Trotsky or Stalin."

"While Nazism is the immediate and pressing foe of democracies," he went on, "Communism, if given a chance, would be no less dangerous to the spirit and practice of democracy. Communism stands for the dethronement of the Christian idea of God."

The speaker said the Constitution does not grant to alien and irresponsible doctrinaires the right to come to this country and roam at will, seizing upon world-wide discontent and capitalizing it by spreading their godless theories throughout our land, preaching the utter destruction of our democratic institutions."

While admitting that selfish interest and social profit of the few at the expense of many has caused much woe in the land, and championing labor a right to organize, to freely choose its own representatives, to receive a living wage and work under healthful conditions, Bishop Leonard declared that labor has no right to seize other men's properties, prevent other men from working or commit sabotage in any form.

British Attack Somaliland Jibuti Radio Says

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Jibuti radio charged today that the British were carrying out systematic attacks on French Somaliland by both land and sea.

In the land attack, it was stated, British regulars attacked the French frontier post of Assamo, forcing the French to withdraw to a hill position.

The radio also charged that British warships have been seizing and sinking small French boats off Jibuti, machine-gunning some of them.

France officially protested to London tonight against sinking of the French freighter Monselet off the Tunisian coast Saturday, which the French attributed to the R. A. F.

Tripoli Barracks, Bengasi Bombed

Cairo, Sept. 24 (AP).—British bombers scored direct hits on Italian barracks at Tripoli and the harbor at Bengasi in heavy raids Monday night, the R. A. F. announced tonight. Three Axis merchant ships were bombed.

Blast Damages French Gas Plant

New York Sept. 24 (AP).—The Vichy radio reported today that a "terrible explosion" did several millions francs in damage to the Bordeaux alcohol plant, which produced synthetic gasoline.

Spy Suspect Says He's Hitler's Personal Friend, Trial Told

By Pat McGrady
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 24.—Hermann Lang, 39, today heard himself quoted as boasting of a friendship with Adolf Hitler during the Reichsfuehrer's seamy days and admitting that he had delivered to his native Germany the secrets of the prized Norden bomb sight of the United States.

The pale-lipped litte engineer listened intently in Brooklyn Federal Court while American counter-espionage agents told of his alleged activities, but, beyond an occasional flexing of facial muscles he showed no emotion. With 15 other defendants, he was on trial for espionage conspiracy.

"Lang told me in July, 1940, he knows Adolf Hitler in person and used to fight with him from 1923 to 1927," testified William G. Sebold, who turned over to the F. B. I. his German assignment in espionage and thousands of dollars sent him from the Hamburg Gestapo in return for a $50-a-week F. B. I. job. "He said he could write to (Air Marshal Wilhelm Hermann) Goering, for Goering considered the bomb sight the most important thing in the world."

"Was Lang kidding when he said this?" asked Defense Counsel George W. Herz.

Sebold, who has been on the witness stand off and on for almost three weeks, shifted in his seat and said emphatically: "He certainly was not. He was serious."

Joseph B. Fellner, FBI agent, testified that he eavesdropped on the conversation—held in Sebold's midtown office last February.

He said Lang told Sebold, who had established a "spy" transmitting set on Long Island, that he had given details of the bomb sight to Germany during a 1938 visit to his native land.

Wanted to Go Back

"Sebold then asked, 'Did you have everything in your head and put it together again in Germany?'"

Fellner testified. "Lang nodded affirmatively and said later, 'I worked with some engineers in Berlin.'"

Both Sebold and Fellner testified that early this year Lang wanted to return to Germany. Sebold said Lang was awaiting German funds with which to buy passage by way of Japan.

"Lang asked Sebold if he had heard about money being shipped up from Mexico," Fellner testified. "Sebold said, 'No.'" (Sebold had testified previously that while Lang and other defendants were grumbling about the tight-fistedness of the German Gestapo, he himself was receiving money in large lump sums for disbursal to spies. He had said he mentioned none of this to the defendants and turned over all money to the FBI.

Linked to Embassy

"Lang said he had heard that some go-between had brought word from Washington that Lily Stein (one of 17 who have pleaded guilty to the indictment) should be careful," said Fellner. "Sebold said he was of the opinion the go-between was from the German Embassy.

"Lang mentioned something about the putsch in Munich in 1923. He said that about that time he had spoken to Adolf."

Sebold testified that Lang had asked him last October to transmit bombsight details to Berlin, but Federal Judge Mortimer W. Byers intervened with the observation that he considered it "inimical to the interest of the United States to permit any closer inquiry of this subject."

Sebold denied, under cross-examination, that he had coerced Lang with threats of having the Gestapo take reprisals against the Lang family in Germany if he failed to cooperate.

Mount Holyoke's Girls Won't Bathe In Harvard's Water

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 24 (U.P.).—The "1000 comely if dirty" girls at Mount Holyoke rejected an offer of Harvard students to share the showers "for the duration of the drought in Massachusetts."

The invitation was sent today after President Roswell Gray Ham had urged the girls to use water "as if it were gold" and forego shower and tub baths because of the water shortage. The girls replied:

"The unwashed misses regret.

"No real necessity yet."

Harvard students made the offer through the Crimson, undergraduate daily, which said, "Our showers are big enough for two."

Parking Test Case Heads for Decision

'Ware, Speeders

12 Men Added To Rush Hour Traffic Duty

Twelve additional motorcycle men today will be assigned to principal arterial highways to discourage speeding, weaving and other reckless driving practices during rush hours.

Upon orders from the Commissioners, special officers were selected for the job by Acting Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly.

Contending the presence of uniformed motorcycle men on the streets deters careless driving, Commissioner Young indicated he would seek to strengthen the present force of 56 men during the coming fiscal year.

Meanwhile the Commissioners planned for a special meeting tomorrow with their police and traffic heads to discuss local problems in anticipation of a forthcoming visit here by New York's Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine.

Called to the meeting are Traffic Director Van Duzer, Kelly, Highway Director Whitehurst, Inspector Miller, traffic supervisor, and Inspector Milton D. Smith, former traffic division chief.

Both Sides Waive Testimony; Issue Put to Newman

A decision by Police Court Judge Hobart Newman in the West Executive Avenue parking controversy without his hearing a word of testimony appeared a possibility last night after a 20-minute court session yesterday.

Witnesses and three State Department employes—defendants in the case—were excused "until further notice" shortly after 2 p. m. yesterday after Judge Newman called both prosecution and defense attorneys into his office for a conference.

The defendants, Clifford Barker, 36, of 3810 Davis Place Northwest, John O. Bell, 28, of 4008 Edmunds Street Northwest, and N. H. Sannebeck, 31, of New Alexandria, Va., and witnesses were summoned to Traffic Court at 9:30 a. m. to stand trial on two charges each of disobeying an official sign and the direction of a police officer.

Ticketed August 30

The three defendants were ticketed August 30 by Policeman Snider for parking on West Executive Avenue in spaces set aside by the State Department and the White House "for cars with official parking permits only."

The case was brought before the court as a test to determine the authority of the police in the regulation of street parking.

Formerly a public thoroughfare, West Executive Avenue was closed to traffic recently to make a parking area for diplomatic officials during the world crisis.

After recessing the court twice in the morning, Judge Newman had the case called before him at 1:10 p. m. Witnesses included Capts. Herbert Marcey of the White House police, and Mark Raspberry, of the park police; P. M. Hamer, chief of the division of reference, National Archives; several State Department employes and Policeman W. K. Snider, of the park police, who charged the defendants.

Immediately the case was called, Judge Newman requested Assistant Corporation Counsel Glenn Wilkinson and Defense Attorney James Kirkland to come into his chambers.

To Be Test of Law

When they emerged at 1:30 p. m. it had been decided that both sides were willing to stipulate the facts, making the testimony of the arresting officer and the defendants unnecessary. It was said the case was a test of the law.

Judge Newman instructed both the prosecution and the defense to prepare their arguments "to include as much law and as many authorities as you can find on both sides of the questions," and bring them to him.

"The witnesses and defendants can be excused until further notice," the judge instructed, "and if we need their testimony that can be arranged later."

14 Are Rescued After Small British Freighter Burns

New Smyrna Beach, Fla., Sept. 24 (AP).—Fourteen survivors of the burned British freighter Arawak, including a plucky 11-year-old girl who finished reading a book in the lifeboat, were brought safely ashore here today.

The Arawak, a 201-ton wooden vessel, out of Nassau, the Bahamas, was destroyed about 15 miles off the Florida coast. After Capt. Roland Roberts, his crew of eight and the five passengers abandoned ship, a Coast Guard surfboat met the Arawak's lifeboat about 4 miles offshore and towed it to safety.

Three-year-old Allison Carroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burren R. Carroll, of Orlando, Fla., toddled ashore, laughed, pointed toward the rolling Atlantic and said:

"Ocean."

"I should think you'd have had enough ocean by now," her mother smiled.

Allison's 11-year-old sister Patricia, clutched a favorite book. She said she was reading it when the fire started and took it along with her into the boat.

"I finished it before it got dark, and it was good," she said.

15 Minutes Killed as House Meets Traffic Problem Head-on

By Robert De Vore.
Post Staff Writer

The magic word "traffic" yesterday slipped into House discussion of a bill not remotely concerned with the subject and in the ensuing 15 minutes members urged the following steps for solving Washington's traffic ills:

One—Acting Minority Leader Earl C. Michener (Republican), of Michigan, urged that a traffic expert—"a good scientifically trained man"—be hired to survey methods of handling traffic in other United States cities, study the peculiarities of the problem in Washington and report to the District commissioners.

Two—"Some of the difficulties might be solved," said Representative Daniel A. Reed (Republican), of New York, "if the investigator were to call in some of the more experienced and intelligent taxi drivers of the city and let them explain the situation as they find it in a practical way."

Three—Chairman Jennings Randolph, of the House District Committee, suggested it might be a good idea for city officials to make another appraisal of traffic lights, saying "I have felt for some months, perhaps many years, that our staggered traffic light system was not conducive to a smooth flow of traffic, or to take care of the increased load in our downtown sections."

Four—Representative Karl Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, indicated his view of the difficulty by asking Randolph a question: "Is it proposed here eventually to move some of these hazardous streetcar tracks and add new buses?"

"We Are All Traffic Experts

The whole chain of ideas followed another suggestion by Randolph. It was that Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst "get in a plane some morning" and see how traffic moves in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Cincinnati and other cities.

"You know, we are all traffic experts, and I think that is one of the difficulties," began Michener. "However, I have another solution. My suggestion is that a traffic engineer who understands the art of the business, be employed, that that individual make these studies in the cities to which the gentleman referred, and report back to the three Commissioners who, I assume, do not claim to be traffic experts."

Latere, to reporters, Michener explained that he meant to cast no reflection on any city official. He said: "Just because a man is appointed to public office doesn't make him a traffic expert."

"The chief of police," Randolph told the House, "is charged with a very real responsibility and certainly we would not want to shirk it here. There have been so-called expert studies made of Washington traffic several times."

Incidentally the bill under discussion was approved by unanimous consent. It would authorize a $500,000 expansion of facilities at Union Station for handling increased railway mail traffic.

Housing Experts To Discuss D. C. Priority Needs

Priority regulations and housing for Washington, termed the Nation's "No. One Defense Area," will be discussed at a meeting called by the Operatives Builders Association of the District of Columbia tomorrow at 8:15 p. m., at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H Street Northwest. Loy Anderson, District director, Federal Housing Administration, will explain building priorities procedure.

The operative builders have invited to attend representatives of the following organizations: Washington Real Estate Board; Washington Chapter, American Institute of Architects; District of Columbia Bankers Association; Washington Board of Trade, Washington Building Congress, Mortgage Bankers Association. District of Columbia Building and Loan League and all builders of five or more houses a year in the Metropolitan area.

Soroptimist Speaker

Mrs. Jean Bennett, of Washington, national president of Soroptimist Clubs, will be the guest speaker at dinner meeting of the Arlington Club tonight in the Little Tea House, South Arlington Ridge Road.

Conservation Group Announces Meetings

The Montgomery County Agricultural Conservation Committee yesterday announced a series of meetings to explain new features of the conservation program. Meetings will be held as follows:

Poolesville and Damascus High Schools, tonight at 8 o'clock; Darnestown and Colesville Schools, tomorrow night at 8; Clarksburg School, Saturday at 8; Barnesville Hall and Laytonsville School, Monday at 8.

Famous Names Join Marines

Welch, W. Va. (AP).—Herbert Hoover, Andrew Jackson, Jesse James and a Roosevelt recently enlisted here for service with the United States Marines. But it's only coincidence. The recruits' full names are Cecil Roosevelt Branch, Herbert Hoover Callaway, Andrew Jackson Bowman and Jesse James Williams. All four are from the same county.

which make metal office furniture, doors and fittings, kitchen cabinets, washing machines, automatic voting machines and similar "less essential" civilian articles.

Inventories Piled Up

Curiously, however, Jamestown industrialists feel that these factories, despite their much greater demands for metal—sheet metal, primarily—will be able to survive the steel drought in better shape than the wood furniture plants.

For many of the metal-working plants have accumulated inventories of sheet metal that may last them many months. And most of the larger ones, with wide-awake management, have either converted their facilities to the manufacture of defense items, or have landed sizable Government contracts, or are doing some of both.

But the Government is not ordering wood dining room tables or upholstered couches. Nor can plants which produce these items convert their woodworking equipment to cut steel and copper for tanks and guns and shells.

Jamestown Not Alone

Jamestown is not alone in facing the problem. Substitute for the soft, reminiscent Swedish accent in the voices of half of the citizens here a similar Dutch inflection and you have Grand Rapids. Substitute for the word "furniture," household appliances, Venetian blinds, weatherstripping, metal fencing, or a score of others, and you have a hundred more cities throughout the United States facing a problem identical to Jamestown's.

At first hearing, it sounds absurd that an industry could be damaged, almost paralyzed, when 95 per cent of its raw material are abundant.

Yet every upholstered chair and couch, every mattress and every bed needs wire springs. They cannot be produced without them. Every bed needs eight small steel hooks to pin it together.

Besides the difficulty in obtaining metal, manufacturers are discovering that lacquer, one step removed from gun cotton, is becoming less and less obtainable.

Turn to Plastics

Heroic measures are being taken to lick the problem. One manufacturer himself rounded up the copper for the firm which was to fabricate his drawer pulls and other hardware. Other furniture-makers are trying to dispense with all possible metal items, turning to plastics and wooden fixtures. For metal, ball-bearing casters, they are going back 25 years and using wooden rollers.

From a strict utilitarian point of view, the substitution is effective. For Jamestown's factories, however, it is economically not enough. The commercial result of the substitution is graphically demonstrated by lining up two chests of drawers identical in all respects except for metal hardware on one and wood or plastic drawer pulls on the other. The substitution puts a $40 piece in a $25 category. But the Jamestown furniture industry is built on a quality, "$40" basis. It cannot compete, and is not organized to live in the $25 field.

Unfortunately for the 300 employes in the furniture factories here, they are constituted mainly of the older age groups, less adaptable in the newer, metal-working field. And even if they can find other jobs, it must be at unskilled tasks, for their present, well-paying skills are specialized to the wood-working field.

Furthermore, it is doubtful if the other metal-working plants in Jamestown will expand sufficiently to give any jobs whatsoever to the wood-workers. These latter plants, their owners admit, are having a hard enough fight just to hold their own, much less expand, in a priorities-dominated economy.

Luckily for Jamestown, these owners and managers are a wide-awake crew. Hard-boiled, shirt-sleeved and, without exception, close enough to the works to answer their own phones without benefit of secretaries, they are much further ahead of the game in switching over and catching defense contracts than the idustrialists in many other areas where the OPM is worried about priorities unemployment.

At least three of the major metal furniture companies have cornered large contracts for supplying metal equipment to Government offices. (Although why the Government is buying metal desks and cabinets if steel is scarce is an unanswered question.) More important, most of the big factories have converted a large part of their facilities to the manufacture of cartridge containers, ordnance components, ship doors and parts, bunks and other defense items.

Confident of Skill

With two or three exceptions—small factories employing 100 to 200 men and whose owners are deeply worried over increasing supply difficulties—this community's metal industries can probably take care of themselves, observers here believe, provided only (and this is a major proviso) that the OPM follows its stated policy of pushing contracts at the convertible civilian goods plants. For the most part the plants are convertible and confident of their technical skill to handle a great variety of items which the military services need.

But the wood furniture industry, on the other hand, is about to be dealt a walloping uppercut by the defense program, the effects of which will be shut-down plants and a major unemployment problem.

The blow can be cushioned only by an allocation to these plants of minimum amounts of scarce metal. The industry knows that these metals are desperately needed for defense manufactures. Its hopes are pinned, nevertheless, on Donald Nelson and the SPAB.

U. S. Franked Envelopes Found In Isolationist Group's Offices

Only one of the legislators whose franked envelopes were found in Dennett's offices was available for comment last night.

"I don't know anything about it," said Senator Clark. "I don't know how they (the envelopes) got there. I never gave them to him."

There was no answer to Senator Nye's telephone, and Representative Sweeney was reported out for the evening. Representative Tinkham has no telephone at home. Representative Day has recently moved and no new telephone is listed for him. Former Representative Thorkelson no longer lives in Washington.

Maloney and Hickey indicated that when the investigation is resumed today they will question witnesses about the operation of book-publishing houses suspected of being controlled and financed by agents of the German government.

Chief target among these suspects is Flanders Hall, Inc., Scotch Plains, N. J., whose president, Siegfried Hauck, was questioned last week. This firm issued a series of anti-British and pro-German books.

Frank B. Burch, an isolationist and Republican leader in Akron, Ohio, pleaded not guilty before Justice Adkins yesterday to an indictment charging that he failed to register himself as an agent of the Berlin government.

Burch posted $1000 bond, which was secured by the National Surety Co. of New York. He was aided at the arraignment by John E. Laskey, former district attorney here. However, Laskey said he would not remain in the case and that Burch would get another lawyer.

The Burch indictment, returned Tuesday, was the first presented since the propaganda investigation began. The grand jurors charged that he was a German agent from January 1, 1940, to July 15, 1941. In this period, the indictment said, Burch got $10,000 from Karl Kopp, the German consul in Cleveland, and spent it circulating propaganda against the Lend-Lease Act and other measures.

To the Associated Press Burch issued a statement denying that he was obliged to register as a foreign agent and asserting that he never did anything against the national defense. He declared the Lend-Lease Act "was an act on our part toward engaging in the European war."

Hersperger Rites Held at Home In Montgomery

The funeral of Elmer C. Hersperger, 75, retired Dickerson farmer and well-known citizen of upper Montgomery County, was held yesterday at his home. Mr. Hersperger died Monday night after a long illness.

Services were conducted by the Rev. William I. Campbell, pastor of the Darnestown Presbyterian Church, and burial was in Monocacy Cemetery, Beallsville, Md.

Mr. Hersperger leaves four brothers, Samuel Hersperger, of Round Hill, Va.; Thomas Hersperger, of Canada; Arther Hersperger, of Barnesville, and Marshall Hersperger, of Poolesville, and four sisters, Mrs. Lawrence A. Chiswell, of Sellman, Md.; Mrs. Robert Winstead, of Washington; Mrs. A. Hempstone Griffith and Miss Julia Hersperger, both of Rockville; a son, Russell Hersperger, of Laurel, Md. and two daughters, Miss Evelyn Hersperger, of Washington, and Mrs. Lloyd J. Jones, jr., of Dickerson.

Mr. Hersperger was a son of the late Aaron Hersperger. He was born in Frederick County

Bombers for Norse Arrive Here Today

Five Douglas bombers bearing the red, white and blue markings of Norway will land at Bolling Field about 11 a. m. today, after flying directly from their training center, Camp Little Norway in Toronto, Canada.

Ten pilots and mechanics, all of them veterans of the war in Norway and all of whom escaped from their occupied homeland, will participate in the good-will training flight to Washington.

British Claim New Successes

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 24.—New submarine successes in the Mediterranean were announced today by the admiralty. An Italian minelayer and a transport were torpedoed and two supply ships of about 5000 and 1500 tons have been hit and a large schooner has been attacked.

A British submarine commander calmly guided his craft on the surface within range of Italian land batteries and while they were shelling him he shelled and "probably sunk" the schooner.

The enemy is trying with all possible means to maintain their flow of ocean traffic to North Africa and the British are resorting to all-out submarine warfare in an effort to stem the tide of troops and supplies that will threaten Egypt.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels; so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Contract Bridge

Exquisite bidding and play mark today's hand as maneuvered by one who has made an art of contract bridge. There is nothing devious or complicated or out of the range of ordinary bridge thinking about the way Howard Schenken, a senior member of the Four Aces, handled the hand. Actually his bid to four hearts was extremey simple, as was his play to safeguard against three heart tricks and a diamond for down one.

Yet, how many players would do it? That is the question. The member of the opposing team-of-four, a life master, did not. Satisfied with the partner's three no-trump bid, he let it ride, forfeiting the chance to make Schenken's safety play—and watched his partner go down two tricks at the no-trump game.

Schenken's partner was Ace M. D. Maier, his co-winner of the masters' pairs trophy; his adversaries were Edward Hymes, jr., and A. Mitchell Barnes.

With lead of the diamond ten coming from West, assume you are sitting in Schenken's seat, South, declarer at four hearts. Would you choose the same line of play he did? His method is presented below.

The Solution

The plan to lead hearts twice from the South hand toward dummy, so as to hold the heart queen in readiness to trump a diamond, is the solution to locating the three missing hearts in West's hand along with a doubleton diamond.

If declarer gives up his trump queen by leading toward it, he loses the contract for West will then win his ten of trumps by putting East in for a diamond lead through. Schenken suspected the danger as soon as dummy went down, and circumvented it by this play of the cards:

The ace of diamonds won the first trick in dummy as the two top spades were cashed. Schenken entered his hand with a spade ruff and returned a small trump. The contract was now safe as declarer could ruff the third round of diamonds with the queen, lead another low heart toward dummy's jack. His losing club could ruff in dummy, giving up only a diamond and the ace-king of hearts.

Dr. C. A. Ransom's Death by Gun Ruled Suicide

The death of Dr. C. A. Ransom, one of Fairfax County, Va., coroners, Tuesday midnight after he had frustrated a nurse's efforts to prevent him from shooting himself, was adjudged suicide yesterday.

Dr. T. B. McCord, the other county coroner, issued the certificate after investigating and hearing testimony of the nurse, Miss Ruth Winn.

Funeral services will be held at the C. J. Ives funeral chapel in Clarendon at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The Rev. W. L. Rible, of Falls Episcopal Church, Falls Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

He is survived by a son, John, and a daughter, Jean, and four brothers, Henry C. and Edmund S., both of Arlington; Samuel J., of Frederick, Md., and Phillip M., of Washington.

Dewey Strives To End Delay In USO Work

Thomas E. Dewey, New York County district attorney and campaign chairman for the USO, came here yesterday to break a deadlock holding up construction of 240 service clubs for soldiers and sailors.

Money to build the clubs has been available for three months and yet work has not yet started on any of them. Six Federal agencies must agree on each of the projects and have not yet got together on even one.

Dewey first saw Secretary of War Stimson, who said:

"The delays in construction of the service clubs had been a matter of grave concern to the War Department. Our men will be returning from maneuvers in another six weeks and it is imperative that the log jam between Government departments be broken.

"When the plan for the Government construction of buildings to be operated by the USO was approved by the President last February, it was expected that the buildings would be finished and in use by our men this summer . . . I hope that the series of conferences now in progress will break the log jam."

Acting Secretary of the Navy Bard also conferred with Dewey, and afterwards called for action. He declared that the Navy had urged construction of the service clubs months ago and that the present need was "acute."

Brig. Gen. Frederick H. Osborn, Army morale chief, has arranged a series of conferences today and tomorrow in an effort to untie the knots holding up the troop recreational centers. Dewey's only comment was:

"The USO has raised the money and is ready to operate the buildings. I am down here trying to get the biuldings finished."

Marraffa Funeral Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Church of the Redeemer for Donato Marraffa, 65, who died at Emergency Hospital Tuesday night after a brief illness. He made his home at 5435 Forty-first Street Northwest.

Mr. Marraffa was born in Martina Franca, Italy, and arrived in the United States in April, 1905. He first made his home in Scranton, Pa., then in New York City. He had lived in Washington since 1908.

He was a member and deacon of the Church of the Redeemer, and was also a member of the Masonic B. B. French Lodge No. 15 and a member of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Charles A. Marraffa, two daughters, five sons, and three grandchildren. Burial with Masonic rites will be in Cedar Hill Cemtery.

Scientists Conclude the World Is Getting Better the Hard Way

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 24.—The human race was declared today to be moving toward a more perfect world society, but at a terrific price in "blood, sweat and tears."

Wars keep mankind under a continual threat of complete social disintegration, Dr. Alfred E. Emerson, of the University of Chicago, said today at the University's fiftieth anniversary celebration which has brought together 2000 scientists.

Remarking that man was still millions of years behind insects in perfecting a social organization, Dr. Emerson added optimistically that "through enlarged capacity for conditioned behavior" and mutual helpfulness "he had discovered a new mechanism of evolution producing rapid and complex social changes," to build a better world.

In the present development of a new society, he said, man had attained the ability to pass on through speech, printing, radio, and writing his knowledge to future generations assuring the progress of knowledge providing this movement proceeded faster than tendencies toward social suicide in war.

Dr. Clarence I. Lewis, of Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., said the Nation should not adopt a fatalistic attitude as it begins to realize the gravity of the present war. Instead it should appreciate that "we shall learn to use this powerful instrument of science for better purposes than to destroy each other and to root out that liberty of thought which has produced science itself" and build a peaceful, prosperous world such as has never been seen before in history.

Man must come to realize that he is only an atom in the universe, one of the countless millions of such particles, which go to make up society and he must learn to work and cooperate with all other men and the forces of the universe in order to live happily, Dr. Charles Hartshorne of the University of Chicago declared.

Great Troop Convoys to Roll Across Nearby States Today

One of the greatest troop movements ever seen in Virginia and Maryland will get under way today as units of the First Army roll toward the Carolina front for two months of war games.

Highways will take on a martial appearance with thousands of Army trucks and other equipment rumbling along to take up position in the maneuver area of North and South Carolina.

The Twenty-eighth Division's 18,000 men will set out early this morning from Indiantown Gap, Pa., by three routes, all leading through Maryland and Virginia.

Twenty-ninth Leaves at Midnight

The 15,000 men of the Twenty-ninth Division will begin leaving the A. P. Hill Military Reservation in Virginia at 11 p. m. in two convoys, one of which will be joined below Fredericksburg early tomorrow by 1000 Regular rmy Engineers from Fort Belvoir, Va.

Meanwhile, a convoy of 79 vehicles carrying the Provisional Tank Destroyer Batalion, G. H. Q. from Fort Meade, Md., to Fort Belvoir, will pass through Washington between 6:15 and 6:45 a. m. today.

With 10-minute intervals between three march units, the antitank soldiers are expected to pass through the District via Maryland Avenue to Second Street to C Street to Maryland Avenue to Fourteenth Street to the Highway Bridge.

Moving by commercial buses, vans, Army trucks aud passenger cars, the Twenty-eighth Division units are scheduled to bivouac in Maryland and Virginia towns tonight and tomorrow ninght.

Bivouacs Chosen

One convoy will spend tonight at Winchester, Va., another at Berryville, Va., and the third at Point of Rocks, Md. Tomorrow night, according to the schedule, the units will bivouac in Buena Vista, Va., Buckingham, Va., and Dillwyn, Va. Among the towns and cities they will pass through are Chambersburg, Hagerstown, and Frederick, Md., and Staunton, Lexington, Roanoke, Front Royal, Madison Charlottesville, Lovington, Appomattox and Danville, Va.

From A. P. Hill Military Reservation, one column of the Twenty-ninth Division will take U. S. Highway 1 to Richmond and U. S. 360 to Blackstone, Va., where it will bivouac tomorrow night.

Another column will travel down State Highway 2 to Richmond and take U. S. Highway 1 to Camp Lee, Va., where it will bivouac.

The two columns will meet the following day at Fort Bragg, N. C., where the troops will stay for the weekend, completing their journey to Morven, N. C., on Monday.

Each column will contain approximately 1200 vehicles, borrowed in part from other units, and 7500 men.

Yesterday afternoon, the Associated Press reported, pyramidal tents and heavy baggage were shipped by rail to the maneuver area where an advance guard of about 1200 men under Col. Elmer E. Munshower will prepare for the occupation of the division's men Monday.

To Test Bridges

Only essential equipment remained in camp as details of men made final preparations for moving while others engaged in last-minute field exercises which wound up the two-week training period at the Virginia maneuver area.

Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding the District of Columbia's 121st Engineers, said he hoped to get his trouble shooters on the road six hours ahead of the main bodies.

The engineers' job will be to examine bridges to make certain that they are of 15-ton capacity, the minimum required for the two 100-mile long columns.

'Chute Packers Want to Sample Work

Lake Charles, La., Sept. 24 (AP)—Uncle Sam's parachute packers, as proud of their craft as French chefs, are a little put out because they aren't allowed to sample their own cooking.

"It used to be that when a 'rigger' finished his two months' course at Chanute Field, Ill.," said a spokesman for the group temporarily assigned to the Third Army air base here, "he had to make one drop in a chute he folded himself.

"But the rmyt abandoned tha idea. When we recently asked if we could make just one drop in a chute, we were told, 'You don't need any practice because you have to be expert anyway the first time you try.'"

An officer said the "riggers," as the packers are called, are being trained in ever-increasing numbers.

So far the riggers have not been overworked in the Louisiana war manuevers with about 800 planes participating. Only three airmen have had to bail out of their planes since the maneuvers started September 15.

Bitter Feud Takes Over Screen at RKO-Keith's

'The Little Foxes' Has Its Local Premiere, With Bette Davis Starred as Regina Giddens And Many of Stage Cast in Original Roles

"THE LITTLE FOXES." Samuel Goldwyn's picturization for RKO-Radio of the stage play by Lillian Hellman, adapted to the screen by the author, starring Bette Davis, supported by Herbert Marshall, Teresa Wright, Richard Carlton, Patricia Collinge, Dan Duryea, Charles Dingle, Carl Benton Reid, Jessie Grayson, John Marriott, Russell Hicks, Lucien Littlefield, Virginia Brissac and Terry Nibert. Directed by William Wyler. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

THE GIDDENS HOUSEHOLD and the Hubbards are still engaged in their savage quest of carpetbagger's wealth in Lillian Hellman's unfailingly faithful screen adaptation of her illustrious stage success, "The Little Foxes," given its Washington premiere by Samuel Goldwyn, in RKO-Keith's Theater last night, before a large and distinguished audience.

"The Little Foxes" is a bitter and malevolent reflection of the rapacious aspirations and enterprises of a group of morally decadent characters who feel, for the most part, that their avaricious ends justify any means of accomplishment, not excluding the equivalent of murder. The Hubbard boys and their sister, Regina Giddens, are sly and unscrupulous "industrialists" intent, at the turn of the century, upon achieving the riches and social prestige of which they always have dreamed and seem now in a fair way to realize. The one stumbling block in their path is Horace Giddens, the invalid banker, whose perception of the iniquities about him threatens their masterpiece of commercial chicanery—the big deal with the mighty financier from Chicago, who sees profit in bringing the mills to the cotton, instead of the cotton to the distant mills, as usual.

Upon this preliminary situation is built a gripping and fascinating drama of deceit, greed, conspiracy, unnatural parenthood and, as we have said, what amounts to cold-blooded murder of her husband by the vastly ambitious Regina Giddens.

The harshness of the stage play, in which Tallulah Bankhead scored so great a triumph, has been partially ameliorated by the introduction of the multiplied scope of the camera and a youthful love theme, not present in the original, but not greatly softened. The death of Horace Giddens, precipitated by the goading of his wife, on the screen becomes a detailed and poignant scene rather than an offstage incident. It emphasizes the repugnance of the play's Borgian central figure. Despite its bitterness and malignant mood, however, "The Little Foxes" in its new manifestation, as it was upon the boards, is absorbing in its shrewd analysis of warped minds and vicious events.

Is Tremendously Well Acted

Bette Davis, as Regina Giddens, loses little, if any, of the effectiveness of the role by making it a little less abhorrent than Miss Bankhead's stage study. Miss Davis is sufficiently ominous for all practical purposes and expresses fully the moral degeneration of the character she impersonates—even without her predecessor's throaty voice, raucous laugh and accent so completely within the time and place. Again she has the temerity to play more than one of her important scenes with her back to the camera and never does she lose command of the dialogue or action in which she participates. This is a high tribute to her artistry, for in her present vehicle Miss Davis is surrounded by a cast of extraordinary competence, largely drafted from the original stage production. Herbert Marshall is a fine embodiment of the invalid, if not the banker, and Richard Carlson does well as half of the newly injected "love interest," involving Alexandra Giddens, child of a house of hate. But it is the presence among the principals of Charles Dingle, Teresa Wright, Dan Duryea, Patricia Collinge, Carl Benton Reid and John Marriott, from the stage cast, that stamps "The Little Foxes" as one of the best acted pictures of the year. Each is perfect in his part.

The film is the further beneficiary of remarkably facile photography thanks to Gregg Toland responsible also for the amazing camera effects in "The Long Voyage Home" and "Citizen Kane;" the sustained evenness of direction by William Wyler and the occasional introduction of Negro spirituals. "The Little Foxes," in its new version, makes strong meat oddly palatable.

Supplementaries Soft-Pedaled

The length of the major feature and the sturdy quality of the entertainment it affords have minimized the need of supplementary attractions on the new Keith bill. The only comedy item on the program is Walt Disney's "Canine Caddy" cartoon. The only other auxiliary is the new composite issue of the Pathe and Universal newsreels.

The High Priestess of Malice

BETTE DAVIS,
as Regina Giddens, the Borgia of the South, in Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of Lillian Hellman's bitter stage play of "The Little Foxes." Miss Davis appears in the role created by Tallulah Bankhead on the boards. "The Little Foxes" was given its Washington premiere in RKO-Keith's Theater last night, following its four-week run at the Radio City Music Hall in New York

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Hurricane Warning!

Hollywood, Sept. 24 (INS).—I suppose the storm that will be raised on the Samuel Goldwyn lot when this story is printed will be equal to Sam's own "Hurricane." But I hear, on good authority, that Gary Cooper is all set for the role of Lou Gehrig and there is an excellent chance that William Wellman will direct him. Now, mind, you, I don't say that Bill is definite as the director, but I'd like to take a little bet on Gary and there is every reason why he should have the part for he's under contract to Sam and he is Mrs. Gehrig's choice.

GARY COOPER

I hear, entre nous, that Paul Gallico has written a terrific script—this, in answer to someone who said that Lou Gehrig's life, although successful, was uneventful and lacked color because he was such a model of propriety.

Will James' name cropped up so much in the news and on my desk I began to think the cowboy artist-author had hired a press agent. But this is not the case—the studios have turned James-conscious with a vengeance.. Just last week we told you that M-G-M is bringing his "Saga of the American Cowboy" to the screen with Robert Taylor, but the news today is that Paramount is going to fictionize the life story of James with Preston Foster, Brian Donlevy and Rod Cameron in the top roles. The story is titled "The Lone Cowboy" and I can already hear the cowboy ditties—"Get Along Little Dogie" and "Headin' for the Last Roundup." Certainly few men have had such a thorough grounding in their subject as James. Born in a covered wagon in Montana, he has been living the life of a cowboy since he was 13. His Western stories are famous, but many critics think him a finer illustrator than writer.

Powell, Loy and the Dog Star

Hollywood, Sept. 24.—Earl Wing caught the sneak preview of "Shadow of the Thin Man" and says, "They may call it that, but it's more than a shadow of entertainment. These are the best 'Who dunnits' Hollywood puts out. The dapper look of Powell and the eternal charm of Loy mean eternal boxoffice for Metro. And as for Asta, he'll soon be the Spencer Tracy of dogdom at the rate he rips off those scenes. I wonder what the 'wags' think of him?"

Reason Orsen Welles is having so much difficulty casting the leading lady for "The Magnificent Ambersons" is that she must be both 38 years old and ethereal. Hollywood Ambulance Rider Reports His Casualty List

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Sept. 24.—There are more maimed actors in Hollywood today than you can shake a fork at. (Yeah, we know bad grammar.)

They've tangled with everything from sleeping dawgs, which woke up and nipped 'em on the nose, to corsets which squeezed 'em too tightly, and from airplanes which smashed their ribs to ladies who stabbed 'em with eating utensils.

It's a dangerous place, Hollywood, and bloody, too.

Errol Flynn is the thespian who claimed he was stabbed. Said the wife of Jimmy Fidler, the radio orator, did it with a fork during a fracas at the Club Mocambo. Fidler denied she did any such thing; Fylnn charged that if the fork had skidded a fraction of an inch, one of the handsomest faces in Hollywood might have been ruined. So all hands are talking to their lawyers.

The man who took on the airplane was Lou Costello, co-starring with Bud Abbot in "Keep 'Em Flying." Costello collided with the plane, which was rolling down the field of Cal Aero Academy, and suffered a fractured rib. He was wearing a parachute, which formed a pad and kept him from being more seriously injured.

The lady who had the bad half hour with the corset was Miss Joan Blondell. She was doing a costume picture, including bustle, and she tried to do the black bottom while her waist was constricted. Result: overheating, and breathlessness, which turned into flu, which sent Miss B. to the hospital.

Dorothy Lamour was applying beef steak to a magnificant black eye; autowreck. Joe Brown was making his first picture in more than a year after months in bed with a broken back; another auto wreck.

Robert Benchley still was on his feet, but losing weight from a mild case of influenza. Dorothy Comingore was seriously ill from an intestinal ailment contracted on a personal appearance tour.

And Marlene Dietrich was sporting the most beautiful plaster cast ever seen in these parts. She fractured her right ankle in a movie a month ago, when she fell over a toy engine with a baby in her arms.

Bette Davis went East, with the oddest looking nose ever seen on a movie star. She was in the middle of making "The Man Who Came to Dinner," when she reached down to pick up a sleeping pup. It woke, frightened, and bit her nose, which now is covered with court plaster and bandages.

New York Calling!

New York, Sept. 21.

ELY CULBERTSON: When the officials of the Contract-Bridge Rules Committee meet again, they'll announce revisions—as an aid to combating the threatening popularity of Gin-Rummy . . . Gene Tunney: Jack Dempsey has had to employ somebody to keep the peace. A special policeman now gets $1 an hour to keep order at the bar owned by the former heavyweight champion . . . Margaret Mitchell: Bob Hope's autobiography, just completed will have more circulation than the aggregate of your "Gone With the Wind," Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," Valtin's "Out of the Night," and Shirer's "Berlin Diary." Hope's radio sponsor is publishing three million copies for distribution—a world's record in the field of biography.

BOB HOPE

MAYOR LAGUARDIA: The Investors Council, a Government subsidiary, has an exhibit at the Civilian and National Defense Exhibit here. It consists of some valuable original models of military inventions, taken from the Patent Office and the Smithsonian Institution . . . The council was reluctant to send these precious models from Washington to New York by express. Its secretary, William Ttate, brought them here, instead, by plane . . . "If they're too valuable to risk, in express," Tate was asked, "what about a possible plane crackup?" . . . "If the plane cracks up," Tate replied, "I'm not going to worry about the original Gatling gun model—or anything else."

LARRY MacPHAIL: Carole Landis, the screen star who will broadcast with Eddie Canter this week, isn't receiving any money for his job. She'll collect the only fee she demanded, in return for her appearance—a set of tickets to the World's Series . . . New York Realty Board: Both Roosevelt town-houses—the President's and his mother's—now are for sale, as a unit . . . Eleanor Roosevelt is living in two rooms of her husband's house. She had given up her downtown apartment only three weeks ago, to be near her mother-in-law . . . Commodore H. S. Vanderbilt: One of the world's most famous yachts, Billy Leeds' "Moana," now belongs to the United States Navy. Leeds, the tin-plate heir, received $250,000 for his round-the-world vessel.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'DWYER: Kings County courtroom talk is that the murder trial of Lepke, for which only one juror has been selected, may be postponed . . . Jimmy Fidler: The Washington trip made by Movie Commentator George Fisher—to testify before the subcommittee investigating movie propaganda—cost him $400. His expenses were over $600, but the committee reimbursed him for only one-third . . . Ambassador Hu Shih: Tommy Manville, who announced his engagement last week, has found time to make another proposal. He saw Noel Toy, the dancer who works at Leon & Eddie's, and pleaded: "Please marry me." Tommy then explained his reason: "I've never been married to a Chinese girl."

LANA TURNER: Tony Martin, whose family lives near San Francisco, played the saxophone in a band there, before he pursued his singing career. His mother, cautious about any step which meant relinquishing the weekly income of a union saxophoneist, regularly paid his dues at the local musician's union . . . A few weeks ago, when Wendell Willkie spoke before a large audience in San Francisco, Tony Martin sang "God Bless America" from the same platform. Tony's mother was in the audience, and listened to her son sing before 20,000 people, while standing beside the man who almost became President . . . After the meeting, Mrs. Martin approached her screen-star son, gave him the union card on which she'd been paying dues, and said: "I guess you won't need this anymore."

BERNARR MACFADDEN: Peaches Browning, who recently married, received an unusual wedding gift from her step-daughter. Two days after the 30-year-old Peaches was married, she became a step grandmother . . . Chairman Fly: Is it true that your Federal Communications Commission will conduct an inquiry about radio programs which give away gifts to listeners? . . . J. Edgar Hoover: For the past few days, a woman has been trying to put through a collect phone call to President Roosevelt. Day after day she's told: "The White House doesn't accept collect calls." Her constant reply is "I cannot pay, but I will pray."

JIM FARLEY: Some prominent Americans have been disappearing from Paris. One of those who's quietly dropped out of sight is Steele Powers, Coca-Cola's representative in Paris . . . Ernest Hemingway: If you're coming up for inland fishing try Chesapeake Bay. Last week, when the President cruised there, he headed for a fishing spot and hove to. Two other fishermen, however, had arrived there first. And so these three American citizens—one of them the President—set their bait, threw their lines and hauled in the catch, only a few feet from each other in the waters of the Chesapeake . . . Emily Post: Oscar Levant went visiting last week. When he entered the room, he sensed an immediate hostility to him. "Oh, I see," said Levant, "with me—its one's company, and two's a crowd."

Wiles' Trial For Murder Set Tuesday

The trial of Lee Thomas Wiles, 32, of Slidell, Md., was set for next Tuesday in circuit court at Rockville yesterday after he had pleaded not guilty to a murder charge in the fatal beating of Joseph Edward Larmon, 34, also of Slidell.

Acording to police, Larmon was beaten to death with a shotgun during a drunken argument at his home September 6.

Gladys Luckett, 49, Negro, of Blocktown, Md., a witness in the Wiles' case, pleaded not guilty to a charge of giving perjured testimony before the grand jury which investigated the case. No date was set for her trial. The indictment against the Luckett woman charges that she falsely denied having sold Wiles liquor shortly before the killing.

Stedman Prescott, jr., son of Circuit Court Judge Prescott, of Rockville, is one of 25 registrants who have been ordered to report for induction October 7 by the Rockville Selective Service Board.

The Rockville board also announced yesterday that induction orders had been sent to five Negro registrants for October 14.

White registrants ordered to report October 7 are:

Negro registrants called for October 14 are:

James Lloyd Dorsey, Ashton; Albert Roland King, Sandy Spring; Joseph Francis Wilson, Rockville; Robert Samuel Moore, Clarksburg.

Army to Spread Its Weeding Out

The War Department announced yesterday that in order not to impair the efficiency of Army units, the removal of over-age Regular Army officers from troop duty will be delayed somewhat and spread over a period of months.

At the same time, it was announced that no National Guard officers who are over-age will be relieved until they complete 12 months' active service, unless they seek such relief.

3 Dead, Damage in Millions as Hurricane Peters Out After Houston Is Hard Hit

Thousands of refugees were straggling back to their homes on the Texas Coast last night after a tropical Gulf hurricane, which caused damage running into the millions of dollars, took three lives and injured scores of others, had spent its violence.

Residents of the Washington metropolitan area, meanwhile, were experiencing another extreme in the weather—drought, the worst in many years.

The Weather Bureau predicted showers tomorrow, but they are not expected to break the drought.

The Texas hurricane, the most violent experienced there in many years, had apparently spent its force late yesterday as it moved northeastward through Arkansas. The storm now is accompanied by heavy rains, raising fears of floods in the Southwest.

From the hurricane, damage to the rice crop alone was estimated at 5½ million dollars by Homer L. Brinkley, manager of the American Rice Growers Cooperative Association, the Associated Press reported.

In addition the storm buffeted bayshore homes, smashed boats to bits, unroofed residences, uprooted trees, disrupted communications and isolated entire communities.

Houston was the last city to suffer winds of hurricane force where it left damage of at least $500,000 behind. Some sections of the city were without electricity.

Plate glass windows—15 truckloads full—were smashed in the business district as the wind whipped through the city at 77 miles an hour. Police and 800 Texas defense guardsmen protected gaping store fronts to prevent looting last night.

The storm's movements were unpredictable. Heading inland, it veered suddenly to strike Houston, then moved toward the Louisiana border before swerving back northwestward in Texas.

The Red Cross and Federal agencies were marshaling their forces to aid in relief work.

Gale Far Out in Atlantic

An Atlantic gale which had been moving northward up the coast for the last three days last night was reported far out at sea by the Weather Bureau.

The drought in the Washington area is being felt most severly in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md., where the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission yesterday ordered water users to take all possible means of preventing water waste.

Only .93 inches of rain have fallen in the Washington area thus far in September, the Weather Bureau said last night. Normal rainfall for the month of September here is 3.24 inches. No trace of rain has fallen since September 11, and the heaviest fall of the month here was .26 inch on September 6.

No Shortage Here

Washington has a 9-inch shortage for the entire year. Adding to the problem is the act that snowfall—a chief supply of underground water—was light last year.

Humphrey Beckett, superintendent of the District water works, said there is no water shortage here. Washington's source is the Potomac River at Great Falls. The river has been well fed by heavy rains at its headwaters.

The present Prince Georges County water supply comes from a filteration plant on the northwest branch of the Patuxent River, with a capacity of ten million gallons daily. Present consumption is between nine and ten million gallons daily for the metropolitan areas of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

Work will begin late in the fall on a Patuxent River dam near Brighton which will create a 5-mile mile lake containing more than six billion gallons of water. Although it will take a year to complete, its waters are expected to be in use by next spring.

Mrs. Brown Dies In Sandy Spring

Mrs. Alice May Brown, 59, wife of Charles B. Brown, Sandy Spring, Md., businessman, died yesterday at her home.

Services will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Free Methodist Church, Spencerville. The Rev. Moses Hayden, of Culpeper, Va., formerly pastor of the Spencerville church, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Union Cemetery, Burtonsville, Md.

Mrs. Brown, who was a daughter of the late Owen Disney, of Howard County, is survived by her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Bowers, Washington; two sons, Maurice C. Brown, Silver Spring, and Thomas E. Brown, Fulton, Md.; two sisters, Mrs. Annie Lethbridge, Sandy Spring, and Mrs. Carrie Easton, Sandy Spring. She had lived at Sandy Spring many years.

Royal Visitor

Since the outbreak of war Washington has seen a panorama of notables glittering and extensive enough to make the Capitalite a trifle blase. Nevertheless the visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor today is an event that will stir even Washington. In this war the duke, unlike most of the visitors for whom the Capital makes a fuss, is a minor personage. This probably is less through choice than circumstance, for he is a veteran of the last war, and millions of his fellow veterans recall him as a winning youngster with a front-line proclivity. It was this experience that endeared him to all Britain. He saw enough service to make him one with all the men who fought, to give him the same desire to remake the post-war world nearer to the heart's desire, and to imbue him with the democratic bearing which had never been seen in a British monarch since the Tudors. Perhaps it was the camaraderie he learned in the last war that gave him no stomach for kingship. At any rate, neither the role nor the halo suited his temperament, and when there came into his life the choice between love and the throne, all his instincts made him follow his heart rather than his duty.

It was this decision that will always clothe him with glamour for the multitude. Time seemed to stand still when, against the background of a story that will be sharply etched in the recorded history even of these eventful years, he imparted his decision to a world glued to its radio sets. It is impossible for such a man to be regarded as a private person. The past clings to him, and it will account in great part for the attention he gets in the United States. He has played his part, and he would doubtless like most of all to think that any honors he receives en route to Canada are the American testimony to the people who as a race know no surcease from playing theirs.

Plot In Argentina

An aura of mystery surrounds the sudden action by regular troops of the Argentine army in occupying all the military airports in that country. The official explanation is that young aviation officers were plotting a pro-Axis coup d'etat. This contemplated putsch, in the words of Acting President Ramon S. Castillo, has now been "cropped in the bud." But some suspicion exists that the plot was largely imaginary, and that the Acting President took this means of showing that his heart is in the right place—with the democratic forces rather than with totalitarian elements.

For some time the Acting President has been under sharp attack from anti-Axis elements for clinging stubbornly to a policy of strict neutrality. This he has done in spite of the revelations of Nazi intrigue uncovered by a Congressional investigating committee under the leadership of a youthful and vigorous Radical deputy, Paul Damonte Taborda. Recently the deputies approved with only a single dissenting vote a resolution to expel the German Ambassador. But Acting President Castillo has thus far postponed action on the matter, and some have suspected that he would somehow find ways and means of evading the issue and avoiding such action.

With anti-Axis feelings in Argentina steadily mounting, however, his stand has become increasingly unpopular. On Tuesday night one Radical deputy went so far as to accuse the Acting President of having "joined in totalitarian plotting." His action in seizing the military airports and arresting the alleged plotters shows or at least was designed to show that these accusations are unmerited. In any event he now appears to have climbed off the fence.

"Pops" At Home

At any time the innovation of indoor "Pops" concerts in the National Capital would be welcome. For 50 years the "Pops" have added to the pioneer distinctions of Boston. They have made the summer evenings in Boston less disagreeable for residents who are compelled to work in the city most of the hot season. The city itself has gained in attractiveness. For, over the pained protests of the Back Bay Brahmins, the open-air concerts are now held in a new and handsome shell on the esplanade of the River Charles. They help to give the city of the bean and the cod a continental flavor. The flavor is not lost, but varied, when the concerts move indoors to Symphony Hall, and drinks can be served in true Bohemian style. The introduction of similar indoor concerts at the Riverside Stadium is doubly welcome in Washington. Our heat stays with us longer, and the dampness lingers in the late-season evenings; and our work is harder. Most Washingtonians these days are laboring at high tension, and the opportunity of stealing away for a few hours to hear music and sip a beer or two at the same time is a refreshment to both spirit and body. Appreciation of the National Symphony's enterprise was shown by the big turnout Monday night. The music was as much to the audience's taste as the beer. And, if this was an experiment, it may be acclaimed an instantaneous success.

Food For Britain

Unless Lord Woolton, the British Minister of Food, has been woefully misquoted, there is a considerable disparity between his and Secretary Wickard's estimate of Britain's food situation. Lord Woolton says that Britain is entering the third year of war with plentiful stocks of all sorts. Britain has larger wheat stocks now than at any time in history. Yet Secretary Wickard says it is essential for us to send Britain at least a billion dollars worth of foodstuffs in the next five months and to figure on supplying the British with 25 per cent of its food requirements. This involves, as Secretary Wickard and his aides know, a virtual agricultural revolution in this country. It means that farmers, whether or not they want to, must produce more dairy products, more pork, and less wheat. But it nevertheless assumes that with all that has been and will be supplied, Britain will still have to fight the war on a restricted diet.

In spite of the Secretary's efforts to impress American farmers—and indeed the general public—with the urgency of a food-expansion program, conflicting reports on both sides of the Atlantic have obscured understanding of the problem. By the end of August we had sent Britain about 420,000 long tons of farm products. This was quite an achievement, some people feel, considering the fact that the first specific British request for farm products got to us only in March. By mid-April some of the supplies requested were on their way. Yet the British, Lord Woolton among others, are credited with saying privately that the volume of foodstuffs flowing across the Atlantic is still unbelievably small, that the total volume has in fact been sufficient for only several days' consumption. If true, this is, of course, a disappointing revelation. But it is quite apparent from the magnitude of the agricultural effort under way that the monthly volume of food exports to Britain, now estimated to be at the rate of 200,000 tons, will mount steadily—provided there are enough ships available for transportation.

It may be that Lord Woolton's optimistic public statement should be paired with his pessimistic private statement, and a mean taken. Perhaps this would provide a fairer gauge of the existing situation. In any case it is ironical that Britain apparently has no need of the wheat of which we have a tremendous surplus. Instead it has asked particularly for evaporated milk, dried eggs and beans and fruit, pork and cheese. From time to time the British Food Ministry has released various colorful but unimportant items of information bearing on American foodstuffs. What is now needed is a comprehensive statement from Lord Woolton himself which will lay conflicting rumors once for all and give this country a clear picture of Britain's food position.

Maneuver Lessons

The first phase of the Louisiana maneuvers has apparently revealed the expected, namely, deficiencies in small unit training and inadequate officer leadership. Gen. McNair, director of the maneuvers, summed up the situation on Tuesday when he told reporters that the ability of officers to train and handle their men properly is still a matter of deep concern to the high command. Prior to the maneuvers it was made clear that officers would be weeded out if they proved incompetent and inefficient. Now, on the basis of unsatisfactory performance, some are being relieved of their posts. This action is undoubtedly a hard blow to those who are personally involved; yet Gen. McNair stated an obvious truth when he emphasized that even a few unit officers, in direct contact with the men, can drag down morale and lower the effectiveness of entire units.

But this revelation in no way supports the newspaper charge that morale is low throughout the Army. During the maneuvers morale appeared to be excellent. The men have been on the go night and day, sometimes with little or no food, and have taken all manner of grueling tests in their stride. This is not surprising, first, because the men are in superb physical condition, and, second, because the maneuvers are considerably more exciting than camp routine. In the past, one of the common complaints of the men has been lack of equipment. Though the volume of equipment in the maneuvers has not been as great as it should have been, nevertheless there has been enough to give the men some idea of the requirements of blitz warfare. Still it is not enough for indefinite training. No particular perspicacity is required to appreciate the troops' need for more of the paraphernalia of war. Without it boredom—and consequently the morale bogey—is inevitable.

Anti-Inflation

The moves against inflation which have been made by the Administration, as, for instance, in the new taxes, have been reinforced by the Federal Reserve Board. The board has big powers over the money supply. As we know from the education we got under the New Deal, most of the money we use is payable by check, and this money stream that takes the form of bank deposits is fed constantly by bank loans. The Federal Reserve Board has authority, within statutory limits, to expand or contract the reserves which the banks must keep in the Reserve System against this money supply. It has now raised the reserve ratio to the statutory limit.

In ordinary times there might be a reduced willingness on the part of the banks to make loans as a result of an increase in reserve requirements. At least they might charge more for such accommodation in interest. This latter development is possible, but the move, insofar as it is destined to hold down bank loans, has already been forestalled by the SPAB.

Since the outbreak of war bank loans have shot up 50 per cent and the uptrend has been marked lately. What is happening is that manufacturers, faced with raw material shortages, have been borrowing from the banks for the purpose of building up their inventories. But the SPAB is now looking into this situation. A census on inventories has been ordered, and SPAB will clamp down on deliveries to those factories which have been accumulating raw materials unduly. This is the direct way to curb the inflation that comes along the route of excessive borrowing at the banks. Industrial controls, in other words, are now doing what monetary controls used to do.

Denials By Sofia

The Bulgarian minister of the interior has come forward with a categorical denial that Bulgaria plans to go to war. "The Bulgarian situation is perfectly calm," he said, "and no pressure of any kind has been exerted on the Bulgarian government from any quarter." He added that his country "has no aggressive intentions against anyone." At its face value the statement would mean that Hitler has again revised his plans regarding southeastern Europe. For any move against Turkey, any attempt to reinforce Axis naval strength by the dispatch of warships through the Dardanelles, any contemplated drive across Anatolia to the Middle East, would inevitably involve Bulgaria in the struggle. Bulgaria is the necessary jumping-off point for any Axis assault on Turkey. Events alone will prove whether the Bulgarian minister of the interior is telling the truth or merely creating a smokescreen behind which the Sofia government's war preparations can go on. In this respect experience with Sofia is not comforting. The disingenuous statements that emanated from Sofia regarding Bulgarian foreign policy in the period preceding Sofia's adherence to the Axis suggests that it is still the counsel of wisdom to keep a sharp weather eye on Bulgaria.

Sterner Sex

We are not a whit surprised to learn that statistics gathered during the recent bombardments of London show that women are only about half as susceptible to bomb shock as men. This is why bomb shock is far less prevalent than was shell shock in World War I. Approximately half the bombees are of the female persuasion, whereas last time it was a strictly stag ordeal. In times like these it is easy to recognize that all the time-honored female pretenses, like screaming at the sight of mice, fainting at a drop of blood, peering under the bed for burglars, are, like the proverbial fondness of the timorous male for putting on uniforms, not a trustworthy index to the true nature of the sex. Rather these are mere devices for the expedition of courtship. Not that each sex hasn't its rightful sphere. In grim and harrowing times it is natural that the stern and dauntless spirit of woman should take the fore. But, when peace returns, this weary world will once more have need of the soft, sweet and gentle influence of the timid and loving male.

SONNET

The crooked cross reversed against the right
Blazes its lurid angles in the sky.
The Moorish Crescent never flew so high,
Nor legionary eagles burned as bright,
Nor the Mithraic Persian's Sun of Night,
Nor fabled lightning from the Jovian eye—
But now the foul distortion lifts its lie
On everlasting darkness, aping light . . .
There was a quiet star that good men saw
Once in the evening over Nazareth,
Shining to render mercy with the law,
Pardon to princes, solaces to death.
Strike! And may God be with us one and all—
Strike the crazed cross that sputters and must fall.

War Aims

If we are to go on effectively in the administration of the Nation's defense program, we will have to disregard more and more the daily entreaties of the Lindberghs, Coughlins, Wheelers, Nyes and other isolationists, opposing the President's policies.

Despite the charges by the pacifists, that we are engaging in the war to save the international bankers, the British Empire and the Jews or irrespective of whether we are a Bull Mooser, Standpatter or New Dealer, the fact remains that we are face to face with a national crisis, whence there is no turning back, hedging or deviating from the course that lies ahead.

Does anybody want the bloody despotism of dictatorship in our own free America, except a few incurable malcontents, a few sap-headed college boys and a few unbalanced college professors?

So the first real step in national defense is to marshal all red-blooded Americans, with a slogan of "Let's Win the War, With F. D. R." Let's put an end to truckling to partisan politics, big and little, and keep America safe for democracy. Because if we side-step now, we may goose-step later.

Country Schoolhouse

The small, unobtrusive country schoolhouse, an American institution in unison with home and church, is rapidly disappearing from our land. The centralized school, with its glamorous setting and modern equipment, is taking its place. The little country school "at the crossroads," which was the community center, happy meeting place in each neighborhood, scene of fundamental education for our liberty and democracy, has been suspended. The school bus or trolley car transports our children from the home to the nearest city or village, and the festive "spelling bee," lyceum programs and singing school of a few decades ago are no more.

Fully nine-tenths of our great men, the characters who have built and maintained our Government and its freedom can, point with pride to some little weatherbeaten country school as the nucleus of their inspiration and future greatness.

Are we losing one of our bulwarks of American democracy in this trend toward urban modernized institutions?

Degenerate Democracy

It is easy to ascertain that democracy in this country has degenerated! Take one look at the Congress. It reassembled to vote on one bill and then decided, in this perilous hour, to have recesses until October 1. Only the heroic protest of Congressman Thill, of Wisconsin, was raised in objection to the cowardly plan to sell out the American people and let one man run the country to his own desire.

At this critical time the men in Congress should turn their minds back to the people whom they were sent here to represent. They should recall the campaign pledges—especially the "No foreign war" pledges—and remain in their places determined to have a hand in guiding the destiny of this great Nation.

The President has never been reluctant to grasp any power or authority the Congress has been willing to let slip into his hands. Just this once Congress should assert itself and demand that it retain its greatest power—the power to declare war. W. E. O'BRIEN.

Presidential Powers

With the world aflame, and the conflagration spreading, it is hardly the time for political partisans who put their hatred of the President above their love of America to darken counsel with words which tend to lower the morale of their fellow countrymen. That the lungs of these miguided men are better than their logic is easily demonstrated. It is argued that constitutionally the President of the United States is merely the agent of the Congress; and that the foreign policy of this Nation must be controlled by one or more speeches of our Chief Magistrate, made when we were not faced and threatened by facts and conditions of today.

When we read the Constitution, we find but two sections of that instrument attempting to describe the Presidential powers, and neither are overparticularized. Nowhere in the Constitution do we find the slightest suggestion that the Congress has any power or direction over the armed forces of the Nation. The Congress has the exclusive power to declare war—an international practice long since outmoded—but the President as the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy has the exclusive power to wage war.

It has been rightly said that at no other time or place did such a wise and patriotic group of men gather together comparable with the "Founding Fathers" of this Republic. In drafting the Constitution they were without any historical or political precedent, for the American Republic was the first commonwealth in human history really based upon the will of its people. The brilliant writers of the Constitution were called upon to organize a new style of Government: one which realized the best that Plato dreamed of and Washington fought for. So in drafting the Constitution they gave us a form of Government which would develop and expand with the growth of the Nation. They drafted a working model, not a strait jacket.

This Nation of ours was born on the battlefield. It was consecrated by the blood of patriots. Therefore the framers of the Constitution conferred on the first President, whose distinguished service in war contributed so much to the establishment of the world's first popular State, the commandership of the Army and Navy. All the successors of Gen. George Washington have succeeded to such leadership; and all of them, including Jefferson, Lincoln, Cleveland and Wilson, have courageously assumed that high command. The writer, who has never yet voted for a democratic candidate for office, thanks God fervently that at this critical hour in the Republic's history America has as the Commander in Chief of the Nation's armed forces Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Nations Keep Young

Nations seldom repent of ill-doing because they do not grow old and die, as mortals, as the ever-flowing streams of new life keep them young, ambitious, greedy and ready for any strife. HARRY DANIELS.

The Constitution

I would not minimize the distinguished contributions of Pelatiah Webster to the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, the natal day of which is properly celebrated today, nor would I detract from the proper veneration and respect his descendant, George W. Mingus, has for him. Pelatiah Webster was a type of active, studious, and energetic businessman, greatly interested and concerned with public questions of government, whose prototype is all too scarce even in this day.

However, Mr. Mingus' letter in your columns of this date makes claims so at variance with the recorded judgment of scholarly historians, it seems altogether proper to direct attention to some of them.

Mr. Mingus says that Pelatiah Webster "was the first author of the Constitution," and refers to his book-pamphlet published in 1783, which urged with convincing logic a two-house legislative body with a supreme court.

Long research has failed to disclose any serious disagreement with the statement of William M. Meigs, "Thus the Virginia plan became the bedrock of the Constitution," nor, with his very illuminating quotation from Momsen writing of the Roman constitution, when he says they were "neither manufactured nor borrowed but grew up amidst and along with the (American) people." Meigs quotes Momsen, and says these words are of "universal application."

The idea of an independent judiciary in colonial America dates to the year 1622, when the Governor and Council of the colony of Virgina in order "to render justice more cheap and accessible" set up a system of inferior courts in the several counties of the colony of Virginia. These "countie courts" were independent in that they filled vacancies in their membership by their own act, and appointed additional members as the developing conditions required and expansion authorized. One of these courts in 1766 declared the Stamp Act "unconstitutional."

The Constitution of Virgina, adopted on June 29, 1776, not only provided for two houses of assembly but carried the definite provision for independence of the judiciary. The Maryland constitution of August 14, 1776, also provided for two houses of the legislature, and an independent judiciary, as did that of Massachusetts of 1780, which became effective in 1781.

Without doubt, Pelatiah Webster was highly influential in securing the ratification of the Constitution of the United States of America by his home State of Pennsylvania on December 12, 1787, which was the second State to ratify, Delaware being the first and New Jersey the third.

It is, however, wholly unreasonable to surmise or claim that Pelatiah Webster, talented and patriotic citizen as he was, and, with business dealings far and wide, was unfamiliar with the provisions of the early conditions of Virginia, Maryland and Masssachusetts, or with the system of independent courts which had operated in the colony of Virginia for more than 150 years.

Bad Breakfast Food

Mr. Westbrook Pegler has doubtless his own policy and his own politics—the "other feller" is always a mere politician.

Verbal assault can be most calculated in its apparent ingenuousness, but the modern reader is not knocked off his feet by Mr. Pegler's technique. After all, Americans are not partial to bull fights, and to be served a new victim on the horn of an infuriated "toro," with one's daily paper, is not appetitive at a sane breakfast table.

A SCEPTIC
Washington, Sept. 19.

The Post Impressionist

Street Scene

The red-bricked, flat-faced house, rising out of the parched, grassless earth, was unbelievably ugly. The earth around it, brown, dirty, lifeless dusty brown, had long since known the cool, living feel of even a blade of grass. The house was like a ramshackle tomb, marking mutely, where once life had been.

Innumerable, small, unkempt, slightly built children ran about the house as though chased by devils. The children were young, very young. The oldest not more than 6. Their extreme youth was discernible only by their size and actions, not by their faces. Their faces were small, dirty, aged. They had none of the freshness, the blossom-like qualities, that rightfully belong to children.

They chased each other madly, as though desperate to put the lie to their graveyard surroundings, by squandering tremendous quantities of living energy. They pummeled each other fiercely; they beat the iron gate with sticks, sounding a crazy rhythm and dancing to it; they dug deep holes in the dead earth for reasons known only to themselves. They were never still, never able to take root; anchorless, wind-driven, crazily, insanely active.

Two older women sat on the steps leading up into the house. Their young-old faces gave no hint of the furious activity that went on all about them. Some part of the brood belonged to them yet they gave no sign; no watchful eye, no listening ear followed any of them. They merely sat in heavy, tired, listless fashion.

One held an infant, suckling it. She would glance at the child from time to time, her heavy, tired face expressionless. The other with blank, immobile face, neither saw nor noted. Her eyes stayed fixed. Her well-worn hands lay limp in her lap. About her was an aura of tiredness. Not the simple fatigue that comes from hard or continuous work, but something deeper, as though the fierce struggle of trying to draw life from where no life existed was too much for her. It seemed as though nothing, neither rest nor cessation from work, would remove the aura from her. She was injured. Besides, she was much too tired to do anything.

When she spoke, and it was seldom, it was with great effort. She opened her mouth and tried to release the words from within. Oftimes the effort was too much for her and her mouth would close long before her words were free, then her face and eyes would light up dimly, flicker uncertainly, die out. Then she was as impassive as ever.

The hot, brilliant sun showed the house in all its musty ugliness. The red, dirty bricks worn by wind and weather stoically bore the heat. The house, with all its windows flung open, seemed to gasp for a breath of air. The two tired women, one tired of bringing life, the other of living, sitting on the steps of the house blended with the surroundings. Their wornness, their tiredness, so with the house and earth, so with them. The only jarring note was the fierce tempo of life as lived by their spawn.

The whole street was made drowsy and more ugly by the harshness of the blazing sun.

The child had finished nursing, gurgled happily. The mother sat with her long, full breast, hanging limply exposed. The child satisfied for the moment, dozed.

The mother said, "Hot."

The other acquiesced with the slightest nod of her head.

The children fell strangely silent. The whole street dozed. Not a sound. Were there trees, there would be no rustling of the leaves. Not even the faintest. Quiet, strange hot quiet. The city itself had fallen into a stupor. The sun, a dazzling golden orb, in a vast blue expanse reigned supreme.

A cry. A sudden piercing child's cry. Filled with pain, fraught with terror. One of the children, a little girl. She stood rigid, frightened to move. Her hands widly clawing at the air, expressing the great pain and fear within her. Blood poured from her mouth, over her chin, staining her dirty blue dress with an ever-increasing and terrifying redness.

The other children, frightened into inactivity, watched her. They stood afraid to move, longing to do something, anything, to help their playmate. With terrified fascination they watched the blood flow from the girl's mouth.

One child ran to the two women, gesticulating wildly, babbled incoherently. The women sat on, unmoved. With an exasperating yell, the child ran back to the group that had formed a sympathetic semicircle about the little girl. She looked wildly about for someone to cling to, to help her. She ran to the women on the steps, the one who had suckled the child, her mother. The child clutched at her skirt, screaming louder, more with fright than with pain. The woman moved not. She looked at the child with curiosity. The child came closer, opened her mouth to show the hurt. The woman looked for a time. The other was completely oblivious. The child's cries had turned into a blubbery whine. She was badly frightened, hurt. "Come, mother, soothe me. Help me, I am so frightened, so full of hurt," she seemed to say.

"Knocked clean out," the mother said. And that was all. The child stood waiting. The other children stood there, watching, waiting. The dozing infant, awakened by the noise, squalled. The mother without a word slapped the bleeding child. The child, for an instant, was stunned, her flailing arms stopped in midair. Her face a terrible picture of unbelief. With a cry that came from deep within her, that expressed the pain, the fright, the injustice and hopelessness of her situation, she ran into the ugly, musty old house to find a dark, lonesome corner, where instinctively she knew she must try to extract from her wretchedness and tears some small measure of comfort.

The mother dozed with her babe. The silent one was more silent. The other children, excited yet feeling a strange restrictiveness, began to yell, chase and pummel each other more madly than ever.

The house looked dirtier and uglier.

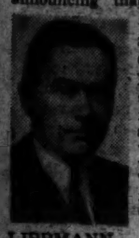
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Neutrality Act



LIPPMANN

ON January 31, 1917, the German Ambassador delivered a note to the Secretary of State announcing that beginning the next day "in a zone around Great Britain, France, Italy and the Eastern Mediterranean . . . all ships met within the zone will be sunk." This announcement, which caused President Wilson to break off diplomatic relations with Germany, is the substance of our present Neutrality Act. The simple truth about the Neutrality Act is that it has made the illegal policy of Germany in the other war the statutory law of the United States in this war. The zone which in 1917 Germany closed to our ships is under the Neutrality Act now closed to our ships by domestic legislation; the suspension of international law on the high seas is under the Neutrality Act accepted as a fact. Thus the United States, which had asserted its rights on the sea, legislated away the rights for which it had victoriously contended, and placed upon its own statute books the prohibitions of Admiral Tirpitz.

That this was an extraordinary thing for a great nation to do is admitted in the preamble of the law itself which states that "by so doing the United States waives none of its own rights and privileges to which it and its nationals are entitled under the law of nations . . . and expressly reserves the right to repeal, change or modify this joint resolution or any other domestic legislation in the interests of the peace, security, or welfare of the United States and its peoples."

THE FIRST great war which broke out after the enactment of the Neutrality Act was the very great war between Japan and China. This was in the summer of 1937. The law has never been applied to this war, and the isolationists who sponsored the law have never seriously asked that the law be applied. So American ships continue to carry goods, including weapons of war, both to Japan and to China. There are no barred zones in the Pacific into which American ships may not enter. Though for four years there has raged a bloody war in Asia, the Neutrality Act is not in force.

Why? Because Japan, as a matter of self-interest, chose not to call the war a "war" but only an "incident," finding it convenient to receive American war supplies; because China, as a matter of self-interest, chose not to declare war against the invader, finding it convenient to receive American war supplies; because the United States chose not to recognize that the war was a war, finding it expedient, and also profitable, to continue to trade. Thus in the Pacific during the greatest war ever waged in the Orient, the Neutrality Act is non-operative and traditional American rights are still in effect.

We are then in the remarkable position of nullifying our own recently enacted law because it suits us to do so and it suits the belligerents to let us do so. But any moment either Japan or China could by issuing a declaration of war compel us to enforce an American statute which as a matter of policy and self-interest we prefer to nullify.

Thus we have placed in the hands of foreign governments the power to determine whether we may continue to violate our own domestic laws in order to enjoy our rights under international law, or whether we must enforce our domestic law and then surrender our international rights.

TWO YEARS later war broke out in Europe, and the law which had been nullified in the Pacific was immediately put into effect in the Atlantic. Not only did we forbid our ships to go to the belligerents—to Germany, France and Britain—but we forbade them also to go to Holland, Belgium, Sweden, Denmark and Finland—all of them then neutrals. We also forbade our ships to go to Eire. On the other hand, we allowed them to go to Italy, which was then still non-belligerent. The reason for this discrimination was that American ships passing to the northern neutrals were within range of the German submarines, which sink at sight, whereas ships passing to the southern neutrals were within range only of the British and French navies, which did not sink at sight but observed the rules of international law.

Thus we placed ourselves in the remarkable position of withdrawing from waters where war was waged lawlessly and ruthlessly and of continuing to enter waters where war was waged lawfully and humanely. In the Pacific we were exercising our rights by grace of the fact that Japan found it expedient not to make a formal declaration of war against China. In the Atlantic we were exercising our rights only outside the reach of the German navy. When Italy entered the war we ceased exercising our rights in the Mediterranean, where the British navy though at war had recognized our rights, because the Italian navy would probably follow the German policy of sinking at sight.

This policy must have created the impression in many minds, perhaps even in Hitler's, that we had deliberately decided as a matter of national policy to submit to force.

BUT that did not end the progress of American humiliation. The zones which we had closed to American ships and opened to absolute lawlessness were not large enough to suit the Nazis. So they proclaimed a much larger war zone in the North Atlantic—in fact one which surrounded Iceland and extended to Greenland. Having been taught to believe by our neutrality law that what Germany declares to be her purposes will in the end become accepted as American law, the Nazis have been preying on ships well outside our own self-imposed combat zone. It just happens that their combat zone is bigger than ours, and therefore, according to Berlin, it is legal to sink ships there without warning.

But even that is not the end of it. In the case of the Robin Moor, an American ship was traveling outside the German war zone, outside our own combat zone, in fact on the high seas. This ship was stopped and sunk, and its crew and passengers set adrift in mid-ocean. And what was the justification of this extension of the area of lawlessness? We have had it from some of our own Senators—that the Robin Moor was carrying contraband of war and, therefore, her crew and passengers had no rights which Germany was bound to respect or that the United States ought to presume to defend.

THERE may be room for differences of judgment as to whether what is left of the Neutrality Act is now of practical importance, and what as a matter of fact it is useful to do about it. The law is nullified in the Pacific. In the Atlantic it is not observed by Germany and in fact not by the United States.

But there is, I think, no room for a difference of opinion that the neutrality law has proved itself to be an act of national self-debasement, a mortifying submission to force, without logic, without honor, and without value even to achieve the purpose for which it was originally designed.

A Laugh For The Duke

By H. O. Bishop

A Court Record

DID you ever hear about the time a Virginia court swapped 10,000 pounds of tobacco for a supply of rum and sugar so that the populace could drink to the health of a recently born Prince of Wales?

It was away back in 1688, 253 years ago.

This interesting old court record is still in a good state of preservation and may be seen in the old courthouse in the ancient town of Tappahannock on the Rappahannock River, in the general vicinity of the birthplace of the Washingtons, the Lees, the Madisons and the Monroes.

SOMEBODY ought to motor the Duke and Duchess of Windsor down to see it. It would give them a good laugh. It is only about a hundred miles below Washington.

The dear old judge, perhaps in his excitement and joyous anticipation, in quill-penning the court order for the swapping of tobacco for rum spelled the word rum with a capital "R" and used a small "G" in writing the word God.

THIS amusing court order in full reads as follows:

"Tappahannock County
2nd January, 1688.
Col. John Stone,
Capt. George Taylor
Mr. John Rice
Capt. Samuel Bloomfield.
—Justices.

"It having pleased Almighty god to bless his Royal Majesties with the birth of a son, and His subjects with a Prince Of Wales and for as much as His Excellency hath set apart the sixteenth day of this January for solemnizing the same. To the end therefore that it may be done with all the expressions of joy this country is capable of, this court have ordered that Capt. George Taylor do provide and bring to the north side of the court house for this country as much Rum or other strong liquor with sugar proportionable as shall amount to six thousand five hundred pounds of tobacco to be distributed among the troops of Horse, Company of Foot, and other persons that shall be present at the said solemnity, and that the said sum be allowed him at the next laying of the levy. As also that Captain Samuel Bloomfield provide and bring to the south side of the court house for this county as much Rum or other strong liquor with sugar proportionable as shall amount to three thousand five hundred pounds of tobacco to be distributed as above at the south side of the court house and that the said sum to be allowed him at the next laying of the levy."

IT SEEMS that at that early period there were two court houses, one on each side of the river, which is almost a mile wide at the town of Tappahannock. This explains why the rum and sugar was for the north and south sides.

HISTORY, I regret to write, is quite silent as to the quality of rum produced by that much tobacco. History, likewise, is silent as to the results produced.

Auto Hearing Opens

Charges Are Exchanged

DETROIT, MICH., Sept. 24.—The automobile industry was in effect placed on trial before a Congressional investigating committee today on charges of having pursued a "business as usual" policy despite the national defense program and of having contributed only a "negligible" share to that program.

The charges were made by R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, C. I. O., the union that has organized the industry in the last few years. They were answered by a panel of automotive executives headed by C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, who appeared unexpectedly at the afternoon session of the hearing after he had learned what Thomas had had to say at the morning session.

Wilson declared that "no one built a single car that got in the way of defense." He held that the public suffered from a misconception of what large-scale industry could accomplish in the way of speed and warned that the country doubtless would be disappointed by this winter's bombing-plane production from the automotive industry.

BOTH LABOR and management spokesmen agreed that Government was to a large degree at fault for the defense lag. Both complained that delays in the switch-over from nondefense to defense production had been caused by slow decisions in Washington.

Neither Thomas nor Wilson—who appeared at separate sessions and did not see each other—used gloves. The former accused the industry of having refused to interrupt its most profitable passenger car season to meet defense requirements and declared that the defense program never would advance as it should as long as representatives of big business held important posts in the defense set-up in Washington.

Wilson demonstrated his forthrightness by asserting that priorities on materials were being unintelligently administered and that certain producers were being permitted to lay in excess stocks of materials that they will "keep in the mud for months."

MANAGEMENT and labor witnesses agreed that an inventory of this country's materials and labor supplies was imperative if the defense program was to be carried out efficiently.

The committee, which is investigating labor migration caused by defense, came to Detroit to inquire particularly into the question of "priorities unemployment" which is expected to put about 100,000 men out of work in this industrial State within a few months.

"Why is it," Thomas said in his statement, "that the contribution from this major industrial power to our national defense program has been, comparatively speaking, negligible?

"Not one-tenth of the basic power in the industry, even at this time of world crisis, has been directed toward ends of national defense."

ASKED TO amplify that statement, Thomas said that the automotive industry, even in times of record production like last year, never was run at capacity; that there always was unused floor space and machinery.

Representative Osmers, New Jersey Democrat, asked for amplification of this passage from Thomas' paper:

"Auto workers believe that a major crime against national defense and their own welfare has been perpetrated in the refusal of the industry to prepare adequately for national defense. Major automobile companies have preferred not to tamper with their regular productive equipment. They have hesitated to do anything which might interfere with their capacity to expand production in the highly competitive production of automobiles.

"INSTEAD they have accepted Government funds for the building of new defense plants and the purchase of new machine tools. They have accepted only such defense orders as might be produced without interference with their 'business as usual' programs."

Thomas made frequent mention of the "Reuther plan" for changing over the automobile industry to aviation, which was advanced by the union last fall. Finally, Representative Arnold, of Illinois, asked who was responsible "for not accepting these proposals."

"The eight or ten months that have been lost," said Arnold, "might determine whether we get in or do not get in this war. I want to know whom you saw in Washington."

"Knudsen," replied Thomas. "And Hillman (codirector of OPM) and the President of the United States."

When Wilson and his colleagues from other major automobile companies—representatives of Chrysler, Ford, Packard and Hudson and of the manufacturers of parts and of the Murray Corporation, large makers of assemblies for automobile and airplanes—appeared at the afternoon session, Wilson said of Thomas' charge:

"I think that is unfair criticism of the industry and of the spirit of the men in it. On October 15, when Knudsen spoke to us at New York, the whole group went on record. We have stood ready to take any project they wanted us to take. I know of no case of refusal."

An Allied Food Pool

Win War First, Reds Urge

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Britain's Allies agreed at a formal council today to help construct the framework of a great reservoir of food and other supplies into which hungry Europe may dip "after the Nazi yoke is lifted."

The council, guided by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and assured in a message from United States Ambassador John G. Winant that America believes the plan has "great prospective usefulness," adopted the scheme without formal dissent.

The food pool plan was a frank bid for the support of the Allied war cause by all the peoples of Europe.

"Our declared purpose," said Eden, "is to insure that with freedom there will come succor at the earliest possible moment to the distressed peoples of Europe . . . No one can know when this war will end and we should make our preparations in good time. The measures which we take now . . . may bring some encouragement to the millions in Europe whose present sufferings we cannot prevent, and give them strength of heart to endure—and where they can, to resist."

ALTHOUGH THERE WAS no formal demur, the Russian Ambassador made little effort to conceal his belief that the Allies had best turn their attention to winning the war first.

"Attributing great importance to the equitable use of all material resources and foodstuffs in the postwar period," said the ambassador, Ivan Maisky, "the Soviet government believes that the most imperative and most pressing task of today is a correct allocation of all economic resources and war supplies with a view to the early liberation of all the European peoples now oppressed by Hitlerite slavery."

Russia, he added, believes that "all people who have recognized the necessity of smashing Hitlerite aggression . . . today have one main task—to mobilize all the economic and military resources of freedom-loving peoples in order to attain full and speedy emancipation."

The council, composed of 31 members meeting in the picture gallery of St. James's Palace, also pledged adherence to the "common principles of policy" contained in the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic charter.

Before the vote was taken, Elco N. Van Kleffens, Netherlands foreign minister, warned against exceptions to plans for access of all nations to world trade and raw materials after the war, and declared that everyone will have to make sacrifices. He referred specifically to point IV of the Atlantic declaration in which Britain and the United States promised to provide such access to all nations, but "with due respect for their existing obligations."

ON THE FOOD pool plan, Eden said the United States, which will provide the great bulk of the necessary commodities, had been assured it would be kept informed and consulted before any concrete plans were decided upon.

The resolution adopted today calls upon each of the Allied governments to estimate the kinds and amounts of foodstuffs, raw materials and other articles which they will need in the first few weeks after the war and to indicate the priority in which they want them supplied. Britain will create a bureau to coordinate these estimates and present them to an Allied committee under Sir Frederick Leith-Ross of Britain. Plans for post-war employment of shipping resources will be worked out shortly.

Eden envisaged a period of post-war reorganization of Europe lasting "at least two years" and said the Allies, in estimating their needs from overseas, must take this into account."

For plain utility!

II

I'll ballyhoo each tailor's plan
And laud the garment trade;
I have no hate for any man
Like Solomon arrayed;
On style I do not look askance,
I'll praise men's coats with belts;
I love the well-pressed pair of pants—
When on somebody else!

III

I like my garments cut for speed—
My form must have free play;
I think that it is well agreed
That's why I look that way;
My pants must be for "stylish stout"
Around the knees and hips,
So when I dash and climb about
There won't be any rips.

IV

My tailor says it is absurd
To try to fit me right;
He claims I am the only bird
He has to fit in flight.
My tailor says I won't stand still
Or in one posture stay;
(He says if he fits me he will Try fitting Whirlaway!)

V

But I dismiss it from my mind
Because my fate decrees
The clothes I buy must be the kind
For all emergencies;
For me the three-piece "Ladder Suit"
Or two-piece "Dashabout;"
I can't go in for raiment cute
With lines a la Boy Scout!

VI

The "Dedication Serge" in blue
Has room for movements free;
The "Shovel Worker's Sack Suit," too,
Goes very well on me
The "Hook and Ladder" forty-four
Is something I can wear;
I must be dressed for peace and war—
On land and sea and air!

L'Envoi

So give a cheer for garment shows
And styles de luxe and fine!
A cheer for everybody's clothes—
But, please, boys, none for mine!

Union Rights Threaten Civil Rights

COURT opinions are dull and difficult reading matter, but these days some of them droll away some of the very liberties for which it is proposed that this Nation go to war against Hitler and, for that reason, should be pondered out. There have been shocking decisions from the United States Supreme Court in union cases, the effect of which few Americans will realize until they discover through some attempt to exercise their obvious rights as free citizens, that they are not as free as they think they are and used to be. This court has granted to unions, purporting to be voluntary associations of free men, rights which nullify the fundamental rights of other Americans and with no distinction between legitimate unions and unions representing the will of underworld criminals or Communists.

PEGLER

The court even holds that a union may exercise its coercive powers to the detriment of the rights of citizens in seeking a wrongful end and, of course, there is no provision anywhere, save, perhaps in the constitutions of a few individual unions, that the men thus empowered to persecute Americans must themselves be citizens of the United States.

A pertinent case was decided by the Supreme Court of the State of Washington a few weeks ago in which it was held that Mrs. Maggie O'Neil, a widow who has several adult children, and owns and operates as a family enterprise two apartment houses in Seattle, must either join the Building Service Employes Union, hire employes who do belong to the union, or submit to obviously false and harmful statements that she is unfair to organized labor.

MRS. O'NEIL had refused to join this organization, which acquired a certain fame under the leadership of George Scalise and members of the Capone mob, and was picketed. She asked for an injunction, which was denied, and carried her case to the Supreme Court of the State, which upheld the union, 5 to 4, with three opinions.

The affirmative opinion, which upheld the union, rejected Mrs. O'Neil's claim that in Seattle, where union goons are the only law, the pickets necessarily intimidated her tenants. So aloof were the four learned men, who subscribed to this opinion, from the notorious realities of the dictatorship of Dave Beck, who rules Seattle as union boss, that they dismissed this claim as a mere conclusion of Mrs. O'Neil. But they then went on to say that even if this picketing did coerce Mrs. O'Neil that would not constitute "unlawful compulsion."

These judges went to the United States Supreme Court for their authority to hold that a union has a right to convey "to the public and to persons especially interested, information that a certain business has been declared unfair." The fact that the person was not unfair would not be considered. The union is to be the sole judge as to that.

THE RIGHT of this union to coerce Mrs. O'Neil by false representations that she was unfair to an organization with which she had no relations was recognized as an exercise of freedom of speech.

Another judge delivered a single-handed assent in which he declared he had not arrived at this result by "any kind of intellectual process." He, personally, agreed with the dissenting judges, but felt a compulsion to accept the guidance of the United States Supreme Court. Otherwise, said he, the Constitution might have one meaning in New York, another in Illinois, another in the State of Washington and so forth.

"Therefore," wrote this judge, "I can see no escape from the disagreeable duty of voting to affirm the judgment of the lower court."

The minority ripped at the majority opinion, recalling that in a previous case the same court had upheld a union's rule which forbade an employer to perform any work in connection with his own business. And now, said the minority, the majority would go "a step farther" and grant a union the right to compel an employer to join its ranks.

"Employing the logic used in the majority opinion," said the minority, "it follows that a labor union has a right to picket anyone, man or woman, who as proprietor performs any labor in connection with his own affairs unless such person abides by a rule directed against self-help. No longer would a man be allowed to mow his own lawn or his wife to cook the meals or wash the dishes. All that would have to be done by someone else."

"If this state of affairs is the logical outcome of 'freedom of speech,'" wrote Judge Steinert for the minority, "I would rather have the United States Supreme Court so interpret the Constitution than to have a part in thus declaring the law. If that is to be the law, then I think we should have less speech and more freedom. I dissent."

11,835,139 Pounds of Aluminum

The Nation-wide aluminum collection campaign yielded an estimated 11,835,139 pounds of scrap, defense officials announced yesterday—a total equivalent to the amount of aluminum needed in 1900 fighter planes or 390 four-motored bombers.

The campaign, conducted from July 21 to 29, fell below officials' expectations, however, for the OPM had predicted that 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 pounds of scrap would be collected.

Experts estimated that the net yield of aluminum from the scrap would be about 7,000,000 pounds. The remainder of the weight represented other materials, primarily iron and steel, which were attached to the aluminum articles.

All but 310,000 pounds of the scrap has been allocated already to smelters having defense preference ratings.

The aluminum was sold to the smelters by the Government and the funds derived went into the Treasury. Officials did not disclose how much was received for the scrap.

Japanese Cabinet Slashes Budget to Free Funds, Materials for Armament Effort

By Otto Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Sept. 24.—In order to free all available funds, labor and materials for national defense, the cabinet today slashed the current budget by 1,823,000,000 yen. The current budget was previously put at 12,875,000,000 yen, although total government expenditures during the current fiscal year, including all armament and war expenditures, are estimated at 21,500,000,000 yen.

The vastness of Japan's national effort, aiming to create a "Greater East Asia Co-prosperity Sphere," is indicated by the fact that Japan's whole national income last year was put at only 30 billion yen and her tax revenues, including monopoly profits and "other income," amounted to only 4,395,000,000 yen. Revenue estimates for the current year run to 5,220,000,000 yen, but in view of the great dislocation of business due to economic measures taken by various countries against Japan, actual revenues have become doubtful. As a result the national debt, rising at the rate of approximately one billion yen monthly, reached 33 billion yen at the end of July.

According to Finance Minister Masatsune Ogura, "the present economy drive is intended to reduce government needs for materials, funds and labor to cope with the existing pressing situation."

"To provide against ever-changing circumstances," he continued, "the utmost endeavor will be made to curtail expenditures, especially in respect to construction expenses and other civil engineering works, official aid enterprises involving heavy expenses and labor service, but also in respect to foreign travel expenses and imports. Even personnel expenses, subsidies, committee expenses, secret funds, reception expenses, and general office expenses will be cut down as far as possible."

The slashes affect both ordinary and special accounts, including outlays for communication, railways and the governments of Chosen (Korea) and Taiwan.

In addition Ogura has been constantly warning the nation that in order to avoid inflation it will have to work more, save more and cut down the standard of living still more than heretofore.

FBI Investigates Fatal Fire at Largest Oil Refinery

Whiting, Ind., Sept. 24 (INS).—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents sought tonight the cause of the huge fire, set off by a series of terrific explosions, which destroyed 16 tanks containing 336,000 gallons of gasoline at the Standard Oil Co.'s Whiting refinery, the largest in the world.

One man trapped in a treating plant was killed, five were seriously injured, and a score suffered minor burns.

Much of the gasoline destroyed was the high-test variety used in aviation, a most vital requirement in the national defense program and for the nations at war.

No person in authority would speculate tonight as to the exact cause of the destructive conflagration but the FBI agents, five of whom were dispatched to the scene within a short time of the first explosions, centered their investigation into the possibility of sabotage.

A company spokesman said sabotage was not believed involved but that the possibility it played a part "will not be neglected."

The first blast let loose at 5:40 a. m., probably in a naphtha treating plant, according to a company spokesman, and from then on until after noon, one after another of the tanks at the 770-acre plant exploded as flames shot 500 feet into the air and the city rocked as if experiencing a bombing raid.

Workers, trained for just such a disaster, donned asbestos suits and helmets and began fighting the rapidly spreading lakes of flame with immense quantities of chemicals and great jets of live steam under high pressure. (See photo above)

'Mr. Rooney' Stars on 21st Birthday . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Hollywood, Sept. 24 (AP).—He's Mr. Mickey Rooney now, but the irrepressible young upstart of the movies didn't act the least grown up at his twenty-first birthday party.

Posing with Judy Garland, his love interest on the screen, Mickey called to photographers, "Look, guys, she's taken off her shoes." Judy had, too . . . so she wouldn't appear taller than Rooney in the pictures.

Mrs. Nell Pankey, Mickey's mother, gave the party last night. Mickey danced with her, and she danced with his father, Joe Yule, whom she divorced a couple of years ago.

Among the guests were Mickey's real-life love interest, Ava Gardner, about whom no one seemed to know much except that she's not in the movies but she's very easy to look at.

'Typical Boy' At Film Door

Hollywood, Sept. 24 (AP).—Douglas Croft stood outside a broadcasting station, hoping someone would have an extra ticket for the show inside.

Along chanced Lew Kramer. Something about Douglas' clean, earnest look attracted Kramer's attention and he invited the boy to be his guest.

Boylike, Douglas related his life story, frankly, enthusiastically.

He was born in Seattle and was brought to Los Angeles when only two weeks old. He likes hunting, fishing, archery, basketball and miniature golf. His hobby is building model boats and planes and his immediate ambition is to take a plane ride.

In private school, his favorite subjects are history and science and he hopes to make the baseball team. In college, he hopes to play football.

Douglas was just a healthy, zestful youngster, neither boastful nor backward, relating his hopes and likes to a friendly stranger.

Kramer was so impressed that he lost all interest in the show.

He's an actor's agent and as soon as the program ended he exacted Douglas' promise to come see him next morning and bring his mother.

DOUGLAS TALKS OVER PART IN SHOW WITH CLAUDETTE COLBERT

"It was just a hunch, I guess, but I knew I had found the typical American boy," Kramer said. He didn't have any part for Douglas, but wanted him ready when the chance came.

A few days later, Twentieth Century-Fox called 46 boys to test for a role in "Remember the Day" with Claudette Colbert and John Payne. Douglas, No. 6 in line, made such a hit that the studio sent the other 40 boys home without a test.

Douglas is playing a typical American boy in the picture and he's happy over his contract, signed on his twelfth birthday. But he's most jubilant because he'll get that plane ride any day, now.

You see, he got his mother to promise he could go up if he got the part.

Emergency Commission Allocates Ships for Defense Needs

This is another article by Frank Kelley, New York Herald-Tribune correspondent, who has just returned from a tour of American shipyards.

By Frank K. Kelly

Planning and building merchant ships for our long-range and emergency programs is a tremendous job for the Maritime Commission. Making the most efficient use in war time of our available tonnage is another Herculean task. The commission is tackling it with all its resources.

To cope with the problem, the commission established the Division of Emergency Shipping on February 24. The duty of this division is to allocate tonnage for the work of bringing defense cargoes to the United States with the utmost dispatch, to make ships available for easing the strain of the Battle of the Atlantic on Britain's war effort, and to carry through dangerous waters those precious consignments of war material which the country has pledged to its unofficial allies—the British, the Russians, the Chinese—in their resistance to aggression.

The men in the Emergency Shipping Division know about ships, routes, ports and cargoes. They were drawn from the shipping world as masters in the war-time art of playing chess with ships.

Aiding the division in its task of shunting ships where they are most needed, the Maritime Commission has seven special representatives stationed as "trouble-shooters" in far-flung sections of the world.

As a third war-time measure to control shipping for our defense, the Maritime Commission has armed itself with the Ship Warrants Act, effective September 25. Under the terms of this act all ships which cooperate with national defense by following approved trade routes, by carrying vital cargoes and by charging reasonable rates, will be issued warrants entitling them to preference in the use of shore facilities.

Early in this war the British government adopted a similar measure, which has proved a powerful weapon in controlling shipping for British interests. The British Empire, with its many outposts, controls a majority of the port facilities open to the world's shipping.

Director of the Division of Emergency Shipping is H. Harris Robson, vice president of the United Fruit Co. Serving with him are Archibald E. King, vice president of the Isthmian Steamship Co. and assistant director of the division for special services to India, Africa and the Red Sea; Ralph Keating, vice president and general manager of the Refrigerated Steamship Line and assistant director for the two million ton shipping pool assembled to help the British last spring; M. L. Wilcox, assistant general manager of the United Fruit Co., and M. W Bowen, foreign trade executive of the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., assistant director for tanker operations. Bowen also is vice chairman of the new six-man tanker control board which supervises the movement of petroleum by sea.

The ship operators fall in willingly and patriotically, says the bustling Robson, who dislikes publicity but stopped long enough in Keating's office the other day to remark that "no one in the shipping industry has yet refused to abandon a cocoa cargo at $50 a ton to fetch crome at $16 a ton."

The operators take what is called a "patriotic loss." Instead of $50 cocoa, they could bring copper concentrates or nitrates from Chile at $20 a ton. Under the Maritime Commission's control, they get $8.50 for the copper, $9 for the nitrates.

Such bulk cargoes, required for defense purposes, have swollen our foreign trade 40 per cent since the outbreak of war. In peace time we carried only 35 per cent of our foreign trade in American bottoms. Now we have to carry all of it.

This not only means "patriotic losses" to ship operators, but has caused the wrecking of some trade routes and has brought protests from interested ports and chambers of commerce.

Before shipping enters the picture our defense requirements of foreign commodities are determined by the Office of Production Management.

In turn the Division of Emergency Shipping orders ship operators to pick up the cargoes. Ships outward-bound for a defense cargo are allowed to carry freight on a normal commercial basis, except that they must adhere to schedule in bringing back defense material.

Daytime Shoe Wardrobe Features Comfort, Chic, and Slender Lines

For general utility wear with a suit, such as the Forstmann wool plaid (left), the soft, wedge-soled suede shoe (below) is comfortable, good looking and slenderizing to the foot. The suit is brown, shadowed by gray in a subtle color combination. Diagonal plaid pockets form an interesting motif on the jacket. This wedge shoe is especially appropriate for traveling.

For casual outfits, such as the stunning gray suede dress worn at left by Movie Actress Martha Scott, the nail-studded pump by I. Miller (below) adds an exciting note to your fall shoe wardrobe. The suede dress in stone gray, softly draped like velvet. Note that the gold-trimmed platform shoe has a midway heel for comfort and low-heeled smartness

For dressy afternoon costumes, such as the silk jersey dress (left) designed by Charles Cooper, the Zephyr elastized suede shoe (below) gives the season's newest shoe silhouette—high cut on the inside, and low-cut on the outside. In the dolman sleeved dress, smooth shoulders are achieved by a yoke inset which extends to the end of the sleeve.

Skating Will Aid Desk Sitter In Preventing Middle Spread

Maribel Vinson, Woman's Champion, Advises This Sport

By Ida Jean Kain

SITTING at a desk is harder on a woman's figure than having a baby—or so Maribel Vinson, famous skating champion, seems to think.

Miss Vinson—pardon me—Mrs. Guy Owen—looks more like a schoolgirl than a mother. But she is the mother of a some months old Maribel, Junior. And after due reflection, she observed that she skated within five days of the accouchement, and also that she was up and skating about very shortly after the arrival of the third member of the family.

The reason her figure got out of shape, Miss Vinson is inclined to believe, is that she sat at a desk for three months or thereabouts to write the final chapters on her second book on ice skating. She was amazed by the difference skating and sitting made on the hipline.

Age Is No Bar

Well, if skating can keep a woman in such good shape during the most critical period of her life, it is only reasonable to suppose that it affords excellent exercise all the time. Maribel says that age has nothing to do with learning to skate and that it is getting to be less expensive all the time. She recommends skates for around six dollars—"they're good enough to learn on, but the boots should be rather better because they are expected to last longer."

The bad part about learning to skate, I learned, is not the ice but frozen muscles and it is not true that the ballet dancer can skim out on the ice the first time with perfect confidence. Unless she has trained herself to ice skate as well as to dance, she has a tendency to tighten up the muscles—and Maribel says you want to relax when you're on the ice. Tennis players seem to do all right, for the simple reason that they have learned to loosen up. Incidentally, tennis is Maribel's idea of relaxation.

What To Do

But to get back to the subject of what ice skating can do for you:

Keep up your high school gym trick of "deep knee bending"—go down on knees, trunk straight, without letting heels come off the floor. Shame on you if you can't! But if you can, vary the bend by coming down with toes pointed, heels as high off floor as you can get them, and trunk superlatively straight.

That, Maribel says, will keep your stomach straight, your thighs perfect, and will definitely beautify your legs.

Another of her favorite skating figures is to stand with both feet parallel. Got your balance? Then flex the right knee, grasp it in the right hand, and all the while maintaining perfect poise, stretch both right leg and arm high out to side. This takes a bit of doing, but is good for both legs and posture.

Learn to Play The Guitar

COULD YOU use a little more popularity—at school, on parties?

Why not teach yourself to play the guitar? With your beguiling music get those lords of the campus to looking your way instead of always elsewhere.

You don't need to know a note to play the chords to accompany a popular song. On your sheet music you find diagrams.

Vertical lines stand for the strings on your guitar. The horizontal lines are the metal frets or bars. To play the chord, press strings with left hand where dots indicate (the numbers show which fingers to use) and with your right hand pluck the same strings over the sound hole, also the "O" string.

Simple—and you don't need to learn a lot of chords for a song. The D7 is one of a mere half dozen you'd use for "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain," for you may repeat the same chord during two or more measures.

Send 15c in coins for our instruction book, "Teach Yourself to Play the Guitar," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of instruction book.

Sheraton, Hepplewhite Designs Often Confusing to Experts

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

DON'T BLUSH if you get Sheraton and Hepplewhite furniture mixed up. Even the wiseacres can't always tell one from the other, for the two men worked during those same glorious years in the history of English furniture—the latter half of the eighteenth century. Hepplewhite's birth date isn't known, but he died in 1786. Sheraton lived from 1751 to 1806. It was natural that both should fall under the same influence of taste, styles, woods available and in many instances both designed similar pieces. But as you study them, their separate personalities emerge and soon you learn to sense the differences at a glance. It's a good idea to take up chairs first, because they are so typical.

Generally speaking, Hepplewhite's chairs are more dainty, more curving, more feminine in line than those of Sheraton. The shield back is the most familiar characteristic of Hepplewhite's chairs and the top line of the shield is unbroken. (When Sheratton used the shield back, he broke the line across the top.) Hepplewhite also made oval and heart-shaped chair backs. The Hepplewhite chair back almost never reaches the seat, but is supported by the back posts (like a picture on an easel).

Feathers Familiar

Prince of Wales feathers were a most familiar motif for Hepplewhite chair backs, but wheat, farms and flowers were also favorite details. Legs are invariably slender and usually straight, with spade feet.

George Hepplewhite himself died two years before the book on furniture designs, signed by him, was published. But his shop was continued by Alice Hepplewhite, his widow. Just how much she had to do with the designs and whether her hand may have had something to do with the delicacy and femininity of the furniture is a question. Actually, it is the book that inspires most of the contemporary reproductions of the style we call Hepplewhite.

As for Sheraton, he evolved a chair every bit as graceful as that of Hepplewhite, but of more sturdy construction. And so a chair of his design usually has the unbroken lines from the floor to the top of the back, and the back itself has a cross rail to brace it firmly just above the seat. The rectangular back is the most usual form, and you will often find horizontal bars as the theme of the design—but Sheraton also used urns, lyres, a swag of drapery for his chair back designs. He even used oval and shield forms occasionally. The legs are slender, too, and either round or square.

Sheraton a Writer

It's improbable that Sheraton actually ever made a piece of furniture. He called himself a mechanic, but he did a bit of preaching on the side and eked out a meager living by writing, drawing and publishing books on furniture. It is these books that are the source for the designs of so much of the furniture we use today in our homes. For his influence on contemporary furniture designing is said to exceed that of any other man.

Alexis Smith Offers Style Tips In New Movie

Hollywood, Calif.—Hollywood expects big things of Alexis Smith, the blue-eyed blonde who carries her five-feet-seven inches like a queen. So naturally she's getting the very loveliest in screen garb.

In a current picture Alexis wears several dresses that offer warm tips for the coming fall season. And after all, that's what fashion-minded women are interested in this time of year.

Stripes are bold in a third handsome outfit done in black and gray several dresses that offer warm tips broadcloth with wool. Leah Rhodes, the designer of Alexis' wardrobe, is among the first to draw away from timid pin stripes to more aggressive ones in a suit whose mid-Victorian jacket has gray and black stripes of the barber pole variety. The skirt is slim and in black wool. These great, wide stripes are not for tiny girls though, Leah advises. But on girls like Alexis they look wonderful.

A twelve-inch monogram in heavy white embroidery is the focal point of a tailored dress in poudre blue wool garbardine. While most costume monograms appear on some point of the silhouette above the waistline, this one is on the skirt, emphasizing a single loose panel pocket.

There's a second innovation certain to please women who like to be the belles of their own balls. The hostess hitherto greeted her guests with uncovered head but Alexis, in a dinner scene, greets hers wearing a very exotic black lace mantilla. More of the lacy filament edges the low neckline of her black velvet gown.

Cactus for the Lapel

Stuffed Calavos Give Variety to Meals

DO YOU very often sit down to make up your menu and market list and try to think of a food to give a lift and variety to your meals? It would seem that there isn't anything that you haven't cooked and served time and time again.

When you get to that stage ask yourself if you have used calavos in the menus this week, or for that matter for several weeks. Calavos are worthy of consideration for they are high in food value, easy to digest and the nutty flavor and beautiful color are also assets.

The calavo is a fruit that has changed its name, for it was once called "alligator pear," then avocado, and now has inherited the name of calavo.

While the calavo is ordinarily looked upon as salad material, yet there are many delicious ways to prepare it. Some cooks know that it is a food that goes into the soup bowl, may be used as a soup garnish, made into sandwich filling, stuffed and baked, used with seafood and incorporated into omelets and scrambled eggs, mixed with shredded chicken and made into croquettes. A high light on a menu will be the calavo prepared in the following way:

Stuffed Calavos

Peel calavos, which should not be too large. Cut lengthwise and remove seeds. For each calavo use the following amount of mixture: Mix 2 tablespoons ground cooked pork, 1 small chopped tomato, 3 capers, salt and pepper, ¼ teaspoon minced marjoram or parsley. Stuff the halves. Cover with beaten egg, then with crumbs, and fry in butter until browned all over. Lay in baking dish, cover with tomato sauce and finish cooking in the oven.

Quick-Energy Drink

Hollywood, Calif.—It's a "Coffee Eggnog" for Tamara Toumanova, premiere danseuse with the Monte Carlo Ballet, when she wants "quick energy" in the midst of strenuous rehearsals and solid food is taboo. Toumanova, who, with the ballet troupe, is making a series of shorts in Hollywood, makes her pick-me-up by beating a cup of strong, black coffee with a pint of milk and a whipped raw egg. She adds a dash of sugar and nutmeg.

Poor Housekeeping Major Fire Cause

One of the major causes of fire is poor housekeeping. "Poor housekeeping" to a fire safety expert does not mean that the furniture is dusty or that the windows need washing. It means that rubbish—old furniture, papers, clothes and many other things that people think they have to keep—has been allowed to accumulate in dangerous quantities in attics, cellars and closets; that oily dustcloths, mops and the like are not kept in metal containers; and that other unsafe practices are followed. A fireman going through your house would spot them instantly.

Other major fire causes involve equipment and its abuse. Put defective or overheated heating plants, flues and chimneys at the top of this list. Have chimneys cleaned periodically and your heating plant inspected and repaired, if necessary, before starting the winter fires. Defective electrical appliances and improper installations follow in importance. Use appliances that are tested and approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., and have all extensions of wiring made by a licensed electrician.

Curiosity White Hot At Windsors' Visit Here

Duchess to Wear Suit of 'Wallis Blue;' Several From D. C. Society Plan To Meet Train at Union Station

By Hope Ridings Miller

"Let's just stay on here for breakfast and then go on down to Union Station and meet the Duke and Duchess of Windsor," somebody said last night at the birthday party given by James H. R. Cromwell in honor of his sister, Mrs. Lionel Atwill.

Truth is, everywhere I turned either last night, or at any time yesterday, nobody seemed to be talking about anything except that famous couple who will pay Our Town a visit today. Seems as if every woman in Washington is wondering:

1. Whether Wally is better looking than her more flattering photographs, or as unattractive as some of the worst ones.

2. Whether Her Highness will remember everybody here who has been boasting of knowing her, for lo, these many years.

3. What she'll wear.

Well, I'm prepared to throw a little light on at least one of those points. I can give you a ruffle by ruffle description of every dress the Duchess will wear while she is here—unless she changes her mind, of course, and wears something else.

What She'll Wear—Play by Play

Anyway, she has promised her favorite dressmaker (the same one that designed her wedding dress and trousseau, remember?) that when she makes her first return appearance in Washington she will be wearing:

A wool suit in a shade called "Wallis blue." It is really a dress and jacket—the dress of elegant simplicity and line, designed with a subtle front fullness just below the waistline. Softly rounded shoulders and buttons up the front are features of the closefitting jacket. With the suit, the Duchess probably will wear a small matching hat (but I can't vouch for this) and a double scarf of marten.

Her favorite dressmaker also hopes that the Duchess will find an opportunity some time while in Washington to wear that very special afternoon dress he designed for her American sojourn. So I won't be surprised this afternoon if she steps out to the press club parties in a frock of black and Windsor blue silk crepe, which is one-piece but looks like a two-piece model. This costume has Windsor blue blouse buttons up the front; and accentuating the Duchess' slim waist, the dress extends into a short peplum at the back. The skirt is slightly flared.

And now for the evening gown that she probably will wear at the British Embassy tonight. It's a model of her favorite dressmaker's celebrated "slip dress," and is sheath-like and absolutely straight except for a soft rippling hemline which allows ease in walking. "The whole dress is designed," so says the press release, "as a foil for its magnificent all-over embroidery, and is solidly worked in an etched design of silk and chalkwhite beads." A high neckline and tiny cap sleeves are further features of the frock.

Evie Robert Fetes Houseguest

"Just another Hollywood story," said Stewart McDonald when I asked him yesterday about published reports of his engagement to Actress Ona Munson. "There's not a word of truth in it," he added.

We were talking over the teacups at Evie Robert's "After five" party, for her houseguest Mrs. George Earle, wife of the United States Minister to Bulgaria. Receiving informally in her new home at 2110 Le Roy Place, Evie wore a black and white figured frock, cut on simple lines. Her mother, Mrs. Harold Walker greeted guests with her while Mrs. Earle chatted with first one group of guests and then another. Incidentally, a last word in fashion was her all black lace trimmed dress which was accented with a shoulder corsage of white orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. Kilean Van Rennsslaer, of Huntington, Long Island, who came to town for the Cromwell party, were among the guests; also Mr. and Mrs. James Moffett, who are staying on in Washington for several days, and Sol Rosenblatt, of New York. Pretty Peggy Palmer came in for the latter half of the party. Gov. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner were there; and Frank Robert, brother-in-law of the hostess; Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Gladstone Williams and several others. Very much a popular center of attention was small Alice Birney Robert, daughter of the hostess, who has just returned from a vacation at Hot Springs, Va., and was greeting friends on all sides.

Lillian Hellman Is Honored At Newspaper Women's Club

"Yes, I have thought of doing a Washington play—but that would mean moving to Washington"—and much as Playwright Lillian Hellman enjoys the Nation's Capital she is deeply rooted in New York. "However, I hope to come down here some time and spend at least four months"—then perhaps the writer of three such smash hits as "The Little Foxes," "Watch on the Rhine" ad "The Children's Hour," will try her facile pen at depicting the habitat of politicians and diplomats.

Yesterday Miss Hellman, wearing a sleek black frock with a rhinestone-feather clip, answered a barrage of questions at the tea given in her honor at the Newspaper Women's Club on Twentieth Street. From 4:30 until 6:30 the charming little clubhouse was filled with guests eager to meet the titian-haired playwright who is here for the opening of the movie version of "The Little Foxes." The president of the club, Mrs. Marie McNair, was smartly turned out in a black crepe frock made with a peplum skirt. Her only ornament was a jeweled clip and she wore a small veiled black hat.

Pouring tea throughout the afternoon were Mrs. J. Fred Essary, whose frock had touches of white; Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper. Mrs. Hurja, who chatted for quite a while with the vivid playwright, wore a black ensemble and her hat was trimmed with fuchsia. Mrs. Roper had selected a black and white printed ensemble.

"Yes, I have a vague idea for a new play and I am working on it," it was Miss Hellman talking. The writer, who yesterday wore a starched black lace calot on the back of her head, has definite ideas about "rest periods" for writers. She lives about one hour's ride from New York City and laughingly admits "it's not far enough—away."

Mrs. Curtis Shears attended yesterday's party and wore a pink printed frock and matching hat. She is heading the United Service Women's Organization which will be meeting on October 14. Mrs. Atherton McCondray, smart in a black and white print, chatted with a group.

Norman Hansen, who earlier had chatted with the playwright, sipped his old-fashioned and talked with Mrs. Farley Smith and Mrs. Pal A. H. de Macarty. Also there were Mrs. Thomas Stokes, Mrs. Cladue Watts, Mrs. Minier Hostetter and several dozen others.

150 Attend Birthday Party Given By Cromwell for Sister, Mrs. Atwill

Social Notables At Brilliant Dinner Party

"Happy birthday to you!" was what several dozen telegrams, telephone calls and letters said, in effect, to Mrs. Lionel Atwill all day yesterday. They were still pouring in last night when guests were arriving for the birthday dinner given by former United States Minister to Canada James H. R. Cromwell, in honor of his sister. Later, Young's Orchestra, of Baltimore, and the famous Jubilee Singers climaxed the evening's entertainment with another special swing rendition of "Happy Birthday to You."

The Foxhall Road home of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, mother of the host and the guest of honor, was the scene of the party, which drew a sizable number of Capitalites and a representative group from out of town. Some time ago, when Mr. Cromwell first conceived the idea of feting his sister at a birthday dinner, he decided he would ask about 40 guests. But by the time 8 o'clock rolled around last night almost 150 Senators, Representatives, generals, admirals, diplomats, dowagers and social notables in general were coming in to enjoy the pleasant fete.

'Nobody Every Wants to Leave'

"Any party in this house is always sure to be a howling success," said one guest, surveying the spacious center drawing room of Mrs. Stotesbury's beautiful home. "This party will go on for hours and hours. Nobody ever wants to leave here."

Dinner was served buffet fashion in the dining room, and guests found their places at small tables set up there and in the two adjoining rooms. Mr. Cromwell, who with Mrs. Atwill greeted guests informally at the door of the drawing room, moved from group to group, seeing that everybody had a good time. Mrs. Atwill, wearing a softly draped beige crepe frock, was here, there, and everywhere, dispensing her own special brand of gayety.

Out-of-towners on hand for the red-letter event included Mr. and Mrs. Herman Livingston Rogers, of New York, who made headlines around the world when the Duke and Duchess of Windsor were married at their home on the Riviera a few year ago. Arriving with them was Clarence Hewes, who will give a dinner for them this evening. Mrs. George Earle, of Ardmore, Pa., wife of the United States Minister to Bulgaria, came with Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., whom she is visiting. Father Joseph Thorning, president of St. Mary's College, was there; also, Dr. Anthony Sindoni, of Philadelphia; Miss Mollie Merrick, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Kilaan Van Rensselaer, of Huntington, Long Island. Still others here especially for the party were Mrs. James Dorsey Brown, of Baltimore; Oliver Eaton Cromwell, brother of the host; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rowland, of Phidalphia, and S. F. Louchs, who sailed down the Potomac in his yacht, which is now anchored off Hains Point.

Officialdom Is Well Represented

Capital officialdom turned out in impressive numbers for the fete. Among them were: the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, Undersecretary of the Interior and Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Col. and Mrs. Edwin Halsey, and Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn. Senators were all over the place—to mention but a few, there were Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator Theodore F. Green, Senator Tom Connally, Senator Joseph Guffey, Senator George Radcliffe, and former Senator F. Ashurst. Also from the Congressional contingent were Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Representative and Mrs. Martin Dies, Representative Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Representative James Barnes, Representative Henry B. Steagall, and Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas.

Brazilian Envoy Among Guests

From the Diplomatic Corps came the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora Martins, the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey, R. G. Etherington-Smith, of the British Embassy, and several others. Lieut. Gen. Sir Colchester-Wemyss, head of the British war supply purchasing commission, was among those present; also Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert Danford, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Day Surles, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Russell L. Maxwell, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, and Maj. and Mrs. Joseph E. Harriman.

Still others there included Mrs. John R. ("Ma") Williams, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Mr. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Herbert Elliston, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, Miss Azadia Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt, Jack Logan, George Williams, George Vournas, Gladstone Williams, Maj. Winant Johnston, David Cohn, Pendleton Turner, Commander Tommy Thomas, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Charles Michelson, Horace Luttrell and Col. Burdette Fitch.

Also in the company were Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Herman Gasch, and many, many more, including Sol Rosenblatt, Irving Hatris, Lucius Humphries and Blevins Davis, all of New York.

Educator Tells of Greece's Plight

Greece Faces Foodless Winter, Speaker Says

By Lucia Giddens

"A terrible winter" of food shortages faces Greece, unless considerable relief is sent, Dr. Minnie Mills, educator who recently arrived from Athens, said at the dinner of the Washington branch, American Association of University Women, last night.

Cimon P. Diamantopoulos, the Greek Minister, listened while Dr. Mills told of the German occupation of the country. She added: "Please don't think that Greece has been conquered. The spirit of resistance is as strong as it ever was."

Dr. Mills has been president of Pierce College, which was taken over by the Germans as a hospital for tropical diseases. She managed to reach Rome and thence went to Lisbon to obtain passage to the United States a few weeks ago.

She described the "terrible threat of starvation" as a result of the Germans' draining the Greek food supplies. "Many were hungry when I left in August. There is no sugar in the market, and almost no rice. The olives and olive oil have been taken away."

She said there is danger that many children under 1 year old cannot live through the winter, because of their mothers' malnutrition.

But the spirit of the Greek people is not broken, Dr. Mills said.

"They still sing oftener than the Germans do. I never heard the Germans sing, except a patriotic song, by order, at the end of a drill," she added.

Although the Greek people had believed so strongly in victory, they met the German occupation with dignity, she said. "They went about their daily business, ignoring the Germans, acting as if they weren't there."

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, chairman of the program committee, presided at the dinner in the absence of Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the Washington branch, who broke her left arm and leg in a fall Saturday.

The dinner was held in the clubhouse. Among guests at the speakers' table were Miss Ellen A. Vinton, who is Dr. Mills' hostess in Washington.

Dr. Mills will make another address on her experiences in Greece at 2 p. m. today at a meeting of the Washington Council of Congregational Women at First Congregational Church.

Woman's Club Unit Names Chairmen

Four new appointments to chairmanships in the Red Cross unit of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., were announced yesterday by Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, president.

Mrs. Royal Bradbury was named general assistant to Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire, the Red Cross chairman.

Mrs. J. Raymond Forney was appointed chairman of the knitting section, Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, home nursing section, and Mrs. Robert L. Lefevre, nutrition class.

A nutrition class is being formed as a new feature of the club's defense program, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. James V. Bennett, who is in charge of training courses under Mrs. Edgar Fowler, chairman of the club's defense committee. The class will start at 2 p. m. October 2 in the E. V. Brown School on Connecticut Avenue.

The class, made possible through the cooperation of the department of home economics in the public schools, will be taught by a trained home economist. Planning of well-balanced nutritious meals and a study of recent research of value to consumers in buying will be included.

A short course in filing will be given by Mrs. J. Alan Maphis on three successive Tuesday afternoons beginning next week, as a sequel to the typing class which meets the same day under the direction of Mrs. M. Johnson. The speech class on Tuesday from 3 to 4 p. m., is led by Mrs. Edwin J. Cameron.

Zonta Club Told of Tasks

While part of the population must prepare emergency defenses at present, a portion of the people must carry on a vital building job, such as that represented by the Girl Scouts, Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn told the Zonta Club yesterday.

Mrs. Glenn, national vice president of Girl Scouts, pointed out that Nehemiah in the biblical account had part of his people watching and guarding the city, while others were building the city at the same time.

Similarly, she said, while the emergency is going on there must be constant building in order to have a strong nation when the emergency is over. She stressed the importance of the work being done by the Scouts and other youth groups, because the youth of today face such a difficult world.

One thousand girls are on the waiting list to enter Girl Scout troops here, with the expansion depending on the training of volunteer workers, she said. She urged that Zonta Club members use their influence to spread interest in the "building end" of this emergency.

The club held its luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A. with Dr. Frances P. Marshall, vice president, presiding.

Church Board Plans Tea

The board of managers of the Episcopal Church Home, 3315 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, will give a tea there from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. Saturday, it was announced by Mrs. Channing Johnson, chairman of the board.

Officers Installed

Miss Dorothy Fillius has been reelected president of Sigma Gamma Sorority. New officers recently installed include Miss Virginia Clark, vice president; Miss Anne Marie Burke, secretary; Miss Ethel Ahearn, treasurer; Miss Rosemary Gallagher, chaplain; Miss Frances O'Donnell, historian; Miss Mary Ellen Quill, publicity chairman.

D. A. R. Group Views St. Paul's

A pilgrimage to St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek Parish, and the adjoining cemetery was made yesterday by the filing and lending committee of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution under the chairmanship of Mrs. Wilfred Clearman.

Led by the rector of the church, Dr. Franklin Johns Bohanan, the group studied the sculptures in the cemetery. Mrs. Harry Gutridge, of Potomac Chapter, spoke on the Adams Memorial by Augustus Saint-Gaudens. An original poem about the Glebe Oak, one of the outstanding trees in the cemetery, was recited by Mrs. Harry Howard, of Thomas Marshall Chapter.

After the walk through the grounds, the group went into the church where the rector discussed the history of the parish, which dates back approximately 200 years.

Charitable Group Unit to Sponsor Tea on Sunday

The Washington Chapter of the Notre Dame de Namur Guild, composed of relatives and friends of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, will sponsor a silver tea at the home of Mrs. Clarence Lee, 4408 Sixteenth Street, Sunday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock. The hostesses will be Mrs. Lee and Miss Mary Agnes Quinn.

The Notre Dame de Namur Guild was organized in May, 1941, for the purpose of building up a fund to be sent to the motherhouse of the order in Namur, Belgium. The money will not be sent abroad until after the war, as it is intended for use by the sisters in the reconstruction after the present conflict. Already the motherhouse has suffered greatly as a result of the Nazi blitzkrieg of more than a year ago.

Miss Bernadette L. Dore is the president of the Washington Chapter of Notre Dame de Namur Guild.

Bethesda Women's Club To Hear Book Review

"Good Neighbors," by Hubert Herring will be reviewed by Mrs. James G. McManaway at the meeting of the Woman's Club of Bethesda at 11 a. m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Leonard L. Nicholson, Rockville, Md.

Defense stamps were used as a premium at the benefit bridge party of the club Tuesday. The party had the two-fold purpose of aiding in the sale of defense stamps and in raising funds for club equipment. The event was arranged by Mrs. J. M. Hammond, vice president and chairman of the finance committee, with the assistance of Mrs. Thomas E. Cassey, Mrs. F. P. DiBlasi, Mrs. C. Eugene Doyle, Mrs. Charles Embrey, Mrs. Mark H. The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Economic Defense Board Begins to Take Shape

Economic Defense Board is beginning to take shape under its chairman, Vice President Wallace, and Executive Director Milo Perkins. No. 3 man is Charles B. Rayner who was brought here from Philadelphia where he was regional director for Surplus Marketing Administration, the agency Perkins formerly headed. Rayner is a Texas oil man who has had experience selling oil and cotton in world markets. Monroe Oppenheimer, former Farm Security attorney, has been appointed general counsel, and David Vaughan is in charge of personnel. Vaughan is on leave from Surplus Marketing, where he was personnel director.

Economic Defense has offices that at least sound swanky. It has taken over the penthouse in the unfinished apartment house at 2501 Q Street along with the top floor. Wallace, Perkins and half a dozen other officials have offices in the penthouse. Uncle Sam has taken over space here of about every description. Defense Housing Coordinator Charles Palmer has part of his staff in an abandoned stable.

It appears that the official staffs of Economic Defense and Export Control will be one and the same. Export Control is being shaken down and it will apparently become a unit within Economic Defense. Vaughan, for example, will recruit talent for both agencies. Incidentally, very little recruiting is being done except for specialists and experts. Export Control apparently was overstaffed and considerable firing is being done. Clerical help is being transferred over to Economic Defense.

Jim LeCron, who managed the Vice Presidential campaign of Henry Wallace, has been appointed assistant administrator of Surplus Marketing by Administrator Roy Hendrickson. He succeeds Phil F. Maguire, who has gone to OPM where he is executive officer of the Purchase Division. Charles Kunkel will succeed LeCron as chief of SMA's distribution division.

More Typist Tests

Civil Service Commission will give typist and stenographer tests twice monthly in an effort to supply the demand of Uncle Sam's expanding defense agencies. Tests will be given for the junior grade only. Entrance salaries are $1260 for typists and $1440 for stenographers. October tests will be given on October 13 and 28. Only one test will be given in December. The commission advises young people to take the tests by pointing to many top Federal officials who have entered the service as typists and clerks.

If you know anyone who is a link-trainer operator please communicate immediately with the Civil Service Commission. Several weeks ago—on August 15 to be exact — the commision announced a test for link operator. Two persons have filed for the test but both have been disqualified because they weren't able to fill requirements. Now what is a link operator? Well, it seems that a machine has been developed which is designed to simulate flight conditions under all conditions. This machine has been installed in the Munitions Building, where Air Corps officers are to be given supplemental training in "blind" flying and the like. Someone is needed to operate the machine.

Navy also is having its troubles in recruiting specialists. The commission has been trying to find a physicist for the department to take charge of an underground sound laboratory set up for research in the use of sound waves to detect submarines and other undersea craft. Other physicists are needed in the Federal service, chiefly specialists in radio and sound. The commission also is trying to locate two physicists with experience in micro-sound work and research supersonics.

Just this week the commission announced an exam for junior physicists. Applicants will be graded on their education and experience. These jobs will pay $2000 to start. Other physicist jobs pay from $2600 to $5600 to start. Twenty experienced radio physicists could be placed today by the commission.

D. C. Trade Handicap Is Charged

Montgomery Clashes With Bacteriologist At Hearing Upon Cream Importation

Public hearings before the Commissioners on legislative proposals to permit the importation of dairy products from outside the Washington milkshed ended yesterday in heated debate over the possible existence of a trade barrier here.

Donald Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the Department of Agriculture, hinting strongly that such a barrier existed, provided a dramatic moment when he asked the city heads to turn and read the pledge to the flag hanging on a wall of the hearing room.

"Trade barriers," he said, pointing to the placard, "don't make 'one nation indivisible.'"

Immediately following this gesture, Montgomery's presence was challenged by Dr. James M. Sherman, professor of bacteriology at Cornell University and a former Department of Agriculture worker.

Tells of Authorization

Montgomery assured Dr. Sherman he received authorization from the Secretary of Agriculture to attend the hearings, explaining at the same time that some of his testimony was an expression of his own views.

Montgomery told the Commissioners that the proposed bill—authored by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana—did not involve a basic issue of public health.

"No outside milk producer," said Montgomery, "would think of supplying unhealthy products to Washington if he was interested in building up his own business."

Rather, said the consumer representative, the basic issue was economic—producer against producer and not producer against consumer.

Montgomery said, in answer to a question by Elwood Seal, counsel for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, that the Department of Agriculture did not contend that the existence of a milkshed constituted a trade barrier.

Obviously referring to the District's rigid milk code, he added:

"That is, a milk shed is not necessarily a trade barrier unless its regulations are so stringent as to limit the number of producers."

Throughout the two-day hearings, only one person—Mrs. Sarah Newman, who testified Tuesday as a representative of the District Consumers Committee—favored the Schulte measure. There were some 25 witnesses and 200 spectators attending both sessions.

The Schulte bill would permit the importation of cream here from any jurisdiction in the country which met U. S. Public Health standards.

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, chairman of the consumers committee of the District Defense Council, although not speaking specifically in favor of the proposed legislation, indicated her group would favor importation of dairy products under proper health supervision.

Wants Cheaper Milk

To determine the possibility of a hinted milk monopoly here, Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. Industrial Council, suggested the Commissioners request an investigation by the antitrust section of the Department of Justice.

He qualified his proposal, however, by stating it was not his intention to charge that such a monopoly exists. He said he was solely interested in obtaining cheaper milk for Washington and indicated that end might be met by the permission of imported dairy goods.

Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, who told the Commissioners he owned a farm and has been supplying the local market with milk for 17 years, wanted to know "what all the shouting is about!"

He said the city now has an adequate supply of both grade A and surplus milk and that local producers have been able to more than meet demands.

Pleas were heard from all sides yesterday to retain the local setup and disapprove the Schulte bill.

At conclusion of the hearings late yesterday, the Commissioners announced they would make a "careful study" of all testimony

1-Cent Milk Group Meets On Tuesday

The city-wide committee appointed by the Board of Education to plan a 1-cent milk program for Washington's needy children will hold its first meeting at 4 p. m. Tuesday, Chairman Robert L. Haycock announced yesterday.

The session will be at school headquarters in the Franklin Building, Haycock, acting superintendent of schools, asserted.

Meantime, an investigation by The Post disclosed that no bona fide child welfare agency is making telephone solicitations for a milk fund in connection with the proposed penny half-pint project.

The information quest was prompted by a call from a Post subscriber who said she had been approached over the telephone by an organization which sought a dollar contribution for its "penny milk" campaign.

The agency in question subsequently denied having represented that its solicitation had anything to do with the program under which the Department of Agriculture would approve 1-cent half-pints of milk for certified needy children.

It is possible that, in the future, one or more juvenile aid centers may make a public appeal for funds to buy the low-cost milk, which is federally subsidized. However, such a drive would hardly start before the organizations application has been approved by the Agriculture Department.

Participation of such child welfare agencies, as well as the public and parochial schools, will be discussed at next Tuesday's meeting at the Franklin building. Community centers, settlement houses, boys clubs and nursery schools are eligible for the penny half-pints, provided the children they serve are from families subsisting on relief, private charity or submarginal incomes.

An economic yardstick on eligibility of children is expected to be submitted tomorrow at a meeting of a special subcommittee of the District Nutrition Committee. Mrs. Lucian Jordan, health chairman of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, heads the group, which will make its recommendations to the Haycock committee.

A penny milk program, government-sponsored, is being operated again this year in New York City, Chicago, Toledo, Omaha, St. Louis, Lowell-Lawrence (Mass.) and Boston are awaiting approval of their applications.

'Pop' Concert To Include Recordings

An hour of recorded requests will follow tonight's National Symphony "Pop" concert at Riverside Stadium. During the extra hour bleacherites will be invited down to the tables to imbibe a few beers.

The policy lengthening the "Pop" program by an hour of recorded music and opening the reserved table seats to all comers—first come, first served—was decided upon yesterday as a result of a poll among first nighters at last Monday's premiere.

Tonight's beer-with-Beethoven concert will be conducted by Rudolph Ganz, popular guest maestro here, who led his first "Pop" back in 1900 in Berlin.

Ganz, freshly arrived in the Capital last night, was happy about the prospect of conducting the National Symphony Orchestra indoors. He's conducted it at the Watergate several times, and was rained out twice.

Returning to Washington with him will be Elsie Houston, the Brazilian soprano, who made such a hit last summer in her first appearance at the Watergate. She will sing the voodoo songs and Latin-American numbers for which she is noted.

Since beer can be served—according to District law—only to the 1200 persons seated at tables, bleacher sitters must take their suds at the stands during two intermissions. To alleviate the pangs of thirst and hunger, however, soft drinks and hot dogs will be served tonight in the tier seats. All service men in uniform will be admitted free.

The orchestra will play the Overture from Wagner's "Rienzi;" the second movement of Chaikovsky's Fifth Symphony; Rimsky-Korsakov's "Flight of the Bumblebee;" "Song of India" and "Dance of the Clowns;" two Hungarian dances by Brahms; intermezzo from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana;" overture to Flotow's "Martha;" MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose" and "Scotch Poem," and Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody."

Fire Destroys Grain Elevator at Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—Fire this afternoon wrecked the Norfolk & Western Railway Co's old grain elevator near the Union Station.

The elevator was under lease to the Davis Milling Co. and was said to have been filled with grain.

Firemen were hampered in their efforts to fight the blaze by the weight of the building and the narrowness of the land approaches to it.

D. C. Court Congestion Held Serious

Despite continued improvement in the time required for the disposition of court cases in the District, "the congestion is still serious," stated Henry P. Chandler, director of the administrative office of the United States courts, in his annual report which was submitted yesterday to the Judicial Conference of Senior Court Judges at the Supreme Court.

"During the past year," the report said, "and up to September 6, 1941, seven judges had been brought in from outside districts to give temporary assistance. With the continutaion of this policy and the taking of office by the new judge recently appointed, further improvement is to be expected. The extent of this improvement is likely to depend in a large degree on the amount of outside help asked for and received.

"At the end of the fiscal year 1940, 15 months would elapse in the District between issue and trial in jury cases, and eight months in nonjury cases," the report stated. "Figures as of the end of the fiscal year 1941 showed a considerable improvement in the time required for disposition of jury cases, which could then be reached in 11 months, while the period for reaching nonjury cases increased to the same figure of 11 months.

"On the whole, however, this indicates an advance since three-fourths of the pending nonjury load consists of domestic relations cases, the great majority of which are uncontested. It is obvious, however, that with civil cases taking almost a year to be heard after they have come to issue and a notice for trial has been filed, the congestion in the District is still serious despite continued improvement.

"The criminal docket is in much better condition than the civil, and with two judges regularly assigned to hearing criminal cases, and more judges when needed, there is very little delay on this side of the court," the report concluded.

In the time required for completing cases, District courts ranked seventh out of 11 districts, the average time here being 12.2 months. Median for the country was 10.2 months. The shortest time for any Federal circuit was 5.6 months, in the area comprising Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina.

The report comments favorably on the use of pretrial conference, described as "a preliminary inquiry by the judge into cases in advance of trial for the purpose of eliminating irrelevant and frivolous matters.

Blue Plains Survey Cited By Randolph

Report of 19 Months Ago Still Holds Good For Conditions in Aged Home, He Says

Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, yesterday dug back into the files of the House District Committee for a 19-month-old report of a Congressional investigation of the Home for the Aged and Infirm and observed that many recommendations in the document would apply to the institution at Blue Plains today.

In the report an investigating subcommittee headed by Representative Thomas D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, Randolph found this sentence:

"The committee feels that the condition of the buildings at Blue Plains is horrible and suggests that a five-year building plan be adopted because of the lack of adequate facilities."

Little Change Found

Randolph also observed that the subcommittee recommended a graduate nursing service at the home, "an adequate staff of orderlies in the infirmary and adequate medical supplies and equipment."

Congressional and District officials who inspected the home in the last few days found conditions at Blue Plains little changed since the subcommittee made its report. Only one graduate nurse was on duty, medical and other supplies were lacking and there was a shortage of attendants of all sorts. Since the inspections, portions of the home have been cleaned and repainted and the District commissioners have ordered supplies.

"The District Committee last year," declared Randolph, "devoted a great deal of time to a study of conditions at Blue Plains, and, after extensive hearings at which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was a witness, the committee made recommendations for improvement.

Survey of Sites Begun

"I am glad to see that once again a movement has been started to make these improvements which are long overdue.

"I shall be glad to cooperate with those members of the House and Senate who have interested themselves in the plight of the aged and infirm citizens of the District who are compelled by circumstances to spend their last days as wards of the community."

Meanwhile, at the District Building, officials, under orders from the commissioners, began a survey of sites for a new home. Led by Assistant Engineer Commissioner Beverly C. Snow, a party of engineer and building department officials investigated property owned by the city at Glenn Dale and Muirkirk, Md.

Congressional leaders have called upon the commissioners to provide as early as possible estimates on the cost of a new institution. Both District and privately owned sites are under consideration.

Brand-New Idea

William H. Bernstein, of 531 Irving Street Northwest, told Judge Hobart Newman in Traffic Court yesterday that speed in a bantam automobile "gives an entirely new conception of driving."

His statement came after Motorcycle Policeman George Woods testified he stopped the motorist Monday for driving between 42 and 45 on New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, between Gallatin and Emerson Streets.

"I've been used to driving a heavy car, your honor,' Bernstein explained, "and I had no idea I was going so fast. You get an entirely different conception in a bantam."

"Yes," Judge Newman declared, "40 miles must feel like 160 in one of those things—$15."

Virginia to Dedicate Commission Building

Richmond, Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—The new Virginia Commission for the Blind building, constructed at a cost of about $80,000 will be dedicated tomorrow at 3 p. m.

She's the Choice Of 1150 Soldiers

DORIS GUSTAFSON, one of "Uncle's nieces," of 2517 Mozart Place Northwest, received 1150 votes of soldiers at the Camp Lee (Va.) replacement center and won second place in the photo-beauty contest there. Three generals and 2910 men selected three as most beautiful from 250 photographs of girls who had written to men at camp. First place went to Dorothy Mae Condon, of Janesville, Wis., who received 1180 votes. Jean Robertson, of Portsmouth, was third

Va. Studies Superroad To District

Proposed Highway Would Run From Occoquan Creek, 16 Miles Long

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 24.—The Virginia State highway department disclosed today it had under consideration the construction of a 16-mile super-highway from a point just north of Occoquan Creek to Washington to help relieve congestion in one of the State's heaviest traffic areas.

Actual building of the dual parkway, however, will depend on future Congressional appropriations for access highways, in which Virginia might participate. Although no detailed estimates have been prepared, C. S. Mullen, chief engineer of the highway department, said the cost probably would be between four and five million dollars.

Preliminary surveys have been completed and the highway commission has authorized the procurement of options, but the chief engineer said no right of way had been acquired.

The drive would connect with U. S. Route 1 near Occoquan Creek, providing an important supplementary artery leading to Arlington Ridge Road, and Columbia Pike, where traffic could traverse any one of the three Potomac River bridges. Mullen said the highway also would tie in with the new War Department development in Arlington County.

The preliminary plans call for north and south roadways of 24-foot width separated by a broad center strip of a width up to 100 feet. Similar to the Pennsylvania superhighway, it would have limited cross traffic from side roads which for the most part would be separated on a different level.

Mullen emphasized that the projected highway was still in the "paper" stage and its future hinged on what Federal aid might be obtained.

Work Permits Given to 6907 D. C. Students

Nearly three times as many District school children obtained work permits in the year ending last month as received them between September, 1939, and August, 1940, Boise L. Bristor, statistician for the Board of Education, announced yesterday.

Taking advantage of national defense jobs, a total of 6907 students received work permits between September, 1940, and last August. In the preceding 12 months 2577 students went to work, the survey revealed.

During the past year an estimated 1000 other students over the age of 18 left classrooms to go to work, Bristor said. This group did not require work permits.

In the past summer months work permits were issued to 2774, while in the summer of 1940 only 777 were granted.

Approximately 1800 more students have enrolled thus far this year in schools in the Bennings and Anacostia areas—most heavily populated by defense workers of any section of the city—than were enrolled in September, 1940, the statistician stated. Revised figures for the city as a whole may be available today, Bristor reported.

Yesterday the total enrollment for schools in the areas stood at 10,479, with more expected to enroll later in the week.

Schools of the section showing increases include Anacostia, Hines and Randall Junior High Schools and the following elementary schools:

Benning, Kenilworth, Congress Heights, Ketcham, Van Buren, Orr, Randle Highlands, Stanton, Birney, Burrville, Deanwood, Garfield, Smothers, Sythax and Van Ness.

An Injured Ankle

Wedged under the wheels of a street car while workmen labored 20 minutes to free him, John Jones, 25, Negro, of 113 E Street Northwest, walked away from the mishap.

Employed as a delivery messenger for a downtown jewelry firm, Jones was traveling north on Fifth Street Northwest, about 7:40 a. m. when the handlebars of his machine brushed the side of a street car going the same direction in the 1000 block.

When he was released, he walked to a waiting ambulance and at Casualty Hospital received first aid for an ankle injury.

'This Defendant Is 19!' Twelve Jurors Say It Doesn't Matter

Guy Oden sat in District Court yesterday afternoon and heard Justice Jesse C. Adkins ask 12 jurors "if that fact that the defendant is only 19 years old will affect your decision." They said no.

The youth, attired in slacks and a tweed sport coat, would have looked more in place on a college campus. His hair was slicked back neatly, and he looked extremely well and at ease. He watched the proceedings with interest, occasionally chatting with his attorney, Milton I. Lewis.

It was only when Justice Adkins announced that the trial would be adjourned until 11:30 a. m. today, and Oden was led away by the marshal that the crowded courtroom realized that this slim, clean-cut looking boy was on trial for his life.

Oden is charged with killing his 15-year-old sweetheart, Helen Cannon, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Helen Yates, in the 100 block of O Street Southwest on July 19.

Yesterday morning in District Court was spent in selecting jurors, which proved to be a difficult task. A panel of 54 persons was questioned before 12 jurors were found. If they remain unchallenged, they will be sworn in this morning.

Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius challenged three jurors, and the defense challenged 18 others. Sixteen jurors were they had conscientious scruples declared ineligible when they said against capital punishment. Four more said that they could not impose a death sentence on the 19-year-old youth.

Dodgers Beat Braves as Cards Blank Bucs

Dixie Walker Stars As Brooks Win, 4 to 2

Outfielder Shines On His Birthday As Braves Lose

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—Lean Harry Gumbert, a pitcher with a sweeping curve and a stout heart, preserved the St. Louis Cardinals' fading pennant chances today by blanking the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 0, on six widely scattered hits.

The victory was a personal triumph for Gumbert, who was cast off this spring by the New York Giants, but it did nothing more than sustain the one and one half game distance between St. Louis and the Brooklyn Dodgers, who moved closer to the championship by beating Boston, 4 to 2.

Winner of five straight games before he took the mound today, Gumbert was superb as he held the Pirates helpless.

There were only six Pittsburgh hits and four of these came stingly in the first four innings. The last two blows by the Pirates were clustered in the ninth inning when Gumbert ran into his first trace of peril, but the lean flinger promptly eased off the spot by forcing Stu Martin to fly out to end the game.

After fanning the last man in the fourth to retire the side by the strike out route, Gumbert mowed down in order the next 14 men to face him, stumbling on Frank Gustine, who singled with one down in the ninth.

Tobacco Johnny Lanning matched Gumbert in a sterling pitching effort until the sixth inning, when the Cards exploded a three-run offensive which sewed up the ball game.

Hopp Cards' Star

Johnny Hopp, a star for St. Louis today with three hits, opened the winning drive by smacking Lanning's first pitch into center for a single. Hopp went to second on Terry Moore's sacrifice and scored the first run when the sensational rookie, Stan Musial, blasted a sharp single to center. Estel Crabtree kept the rally alive by singling and raced to second as Outfielder Vince DiMaggio threw to third in a futile attempt to cut off Musial. Frank Crespi was given an intentional pass, filling the bases, and this strategy backfired when Martin (Slats) Marion doubled to leftcenter, scoring Musial and Crabtree. Fireman Bob Klinger relieved Lanning and quenched the Cards without further damage.

St. Louis Keeps Faint Hope by Beating Pittsburgh, 4 to 0

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 24.—If Dixie Walker never gets another birthday present, he'll still be 'way ahead of the game.

Dixie reached the ripe age of 31 today and celebrated with a seventh-inning triple with the bases loaded to send Brooklyn's beloved "bums" to a 4-to-2 triumph over the Boston Braves.

That was the ball game and another nail driven into the coffin of the St. Louis Cardinals' pennant hopes. The Cards shut out Pittsburgh once again, 4 to 0, but could not slice an inch off the game and one-half margin Brooklyn is enjoying. Each club has three contests left.

Medwick Opens Outburst

Up to that inning the game had been a tight pitching battle between Kirby Higbe, who also collected a present in his twenty-second victory although it wasn't his birthday, and Jim Tobin. The Braves pushed across a pair of unearned tallies in the fourth on two hits and two errors to give the seventh-place Boston club the lead it carried into the seventh.

Joe Medwick opened the seventh with a blow to Eddie Miller's right. The Boston shortstop handled it cleanly but his off-balance throw was too late and "Ducky" beat it out for a hit.

Lavagetto flied to Cooney, but "Pee Wee" Reese greeted Tobin with a single to center, Medwick holding second. Lew Riggs batted for Mickey Owen and hit sharply to Miller, who threw to Al Roberge, but Umpire "Beans" Reardon called Reese safe to uncork a terrific argument in which most of the Boston team joined.

With all hands safe, Jim Wasdell batted for Higbe. Sibby Sisti made a spectacular stop of his hot drive and cut down Medwick at the plate for the second out.

Walker stepped to the plate with the bases loaded. He hadn't collected a hit in three previous appearances.

West, who had come in fast to snare his blooping liner in the third, edged in close behind shortstop. Then Walker got hold of a fast pitch and drove it high and far into left field.

Max rushed back, but it was easy to see that he would not be close. The ball dropped near the fence, 350 feet from the plate, for a triple and Reese, Riggs and Wasdell romped over the plate with the three big runs.

Reese Triples

Brooklyn added another in the eighth when Lavagetto drew a base on balls with two away and came all the way around on a tremendous triple by Reese, which bounced between John Cooney and Paul Waner far out in right center.

Boston's scores came in the fourth, which Cooney opened by reaching first as Reese momentarily bobbled his hard smash. Buddy Hassett bunted him along to second and he took third as Waner singled briskly to left.

West singled to center, scoring Cooney, while Waner held up at second. Bill Herman fielded Miller's drive and threw West out at second. Then Waner scored the second run a minute later when Lavagetto fumbled a sharp blast down the third base line by Al Roberge.

Johnstown Added To Eastern Hockey League Schedule

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 24.—Directors of the Eastern Hockey League today admitted Johnstown, Pa., as the seventh member of the circuit and announced a 60-game schedule to open November 14.

Tom Lockhart, of New York, was elected president of the league. Other officers are S. G. Loeffler, Washington, vice president, and Phil Thompson, Atlantic City, N. J., secretary-treasurer. Mel Harwood was named chief referee.

Teams in the league are Atlantic City, Baltimore, Boston, Johnstown, Washington, New York and Riverdale, N. J.

So Another Season Ends at Griffith Stadium

The tumult and the shouting died with the echo of the final out of 1941 at Griffith Stadium yesterday, and players of the Nats and Red Sox made their way down the hatch to the dressing rooms. Identifiable are Pitcher Arnold Anderson, of the Nats (No. 18), followed by Catcher Cliff Bolton, Third Baseman Jim Tabor (No. 5), of Boston, and Pitcher Heber Newsome, of the Red Sox

Bosox Beat Nats Twice In Final Games Here

Dom DiMaggio Hits Homer With Bases Loaded in Opener; Griffs Bow, 7-2, 5-4

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats, when last seen in Washington this season, were losing a double-header to the Red Sox. Their 1941 fade-out at Griffith Stadium yesterday was something less than stirring, accompanied as it was by a pair of defeats, 7-2 and 5-4.

Washington took a six-game winning streak into the twin bill and little Dom DiMaggio put an end to that item by swatting one of Dutch Leonard's pitches for a home run in the seventh inning of the first game. The bases, as it happened, were full of Red Sox at the time, so that it was a very important swat.

And Washington has only a semi-claim on sixth place this morning. While the Nats were being slapped down twice, the St. Louis Browns were hunching into a tie for sixth by beating the Tigers, 3-1, out in St. Louis. Dutch Leonard's dreams of being a 20-game winner are shattered, and a rookie left hander named Chick Mulligan knows what it is to lose his first big league start.

Shows Good Form

Young Mulligan, who came up to the Nats from Trenton with a left-handed knuckle ball, did himself proud nevertheless, in going the route in the second game. Actually he outpitched Heber Newsome, who gave up a dozen hits to the Nats while Mulligan was allowing only ten. Mulligan's support was visible but not very good.

In that first game, the Nats took a thorough beating from Right-hander Charley Wagner of the Red Sox who held 'em to four hits and was pitching one-hit ball until the the eighth inning. Roger Cramer's first-inning single was the only Washington blow until Vernon opened the eighth with a single.

It was a sad sort of day, incidentally, for Ted Williams who is striving to become the American League's first .400 hitter since Harry Heilman achieved that feat in 1923. William's average took a horrible sock when he was held to one hit in seven times at bat in the twin bill. He went into the games batting a comfortable .405 and came out of 'em hitting a skimpy .401.

After Leonard and Arnold Anderson had held Williams hitless in three times at bat in the first game, although walking him twice, Williams made his only hit of the day when he beat out an infield blow against Mulligan in the second game. Bloodworth made a fine stop

Wood, Nelson Win in $2000 Golf Match

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 24.—National Open Champion Craig Wood and Byron Nelson completed their rout today of the Texas combination of Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret by winning, 5 and 4, in the $2000 36-hole best ball match. It was the first major defeat of the Hogan-Demaret team.

Wood and Nelson carded a best ball of 63, nine under par for the Country Club of Detroit course, to maintain the five-hole lead they gained yesterday in the first half of the match on Nelson's spectacular putting. Today Wood contributed the decisive shot with an eagle three on the twenty-seventh hole.

The winners pocketed the entire purse.

Portable Radios, Cameras Banned At Notre Dame

By International News Service

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 24.—Patrons of the pigskin parade will have to park their portable radios and movie cameras at the gate if they want to see the Shamrock team in action at the home, Notre Dame officials announced tonight.

A statement mailed with the tickets said:

"In consideration of the majority of our patrons, the university is forced to prohibit the use of movie cameras and portable radios in the stadium. Patrons bringing the cameras or radios to the game must check them at the gate."

Nashville Wins Over Dallas In Dixie Series

By the United Press

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 24.—The Nashville Vols of the Southern Association, by defeating Dallas of the Texas League, 8-6, tonight ran its string to three consecutive victories, without a defeat, in the twenty-second annual Dixie Series.

The Vols lacked only one more win of annexing its second straight Dixie championship.

Dallas' four-run rally in the ninth fell two tallies short of tying the representatives of the Southern loop.

Russ Meers, Nashville's starting pitcher, was credited with the win, although he was retired in the final-inning blast of the Dallas batters. Leo Twardy and Charlie Gassaway followed Meers to the mound.

Gordon Maltzberger lasted in the pitcher's box for Dallas until the eighth, when Nashville scored thrice. He was relieved by Joe Demoran.

Nashville outhit Dallas, 17 to 12, and the Texas team made three errors.

Clientele of Joe's Bar Finds Durocher a Bum—Until Strategy Boosts His Stock

By the United Press

Joe's Bar and Grill, Brooklyn, Sept. 24.—For a little while today Leo Durocher was a bum.

Brooklyn's evacuees were in Boston, absorbing culture and a first-hand impression of the Boston Braves, which consists of a battery and some fielders. Brooklyn was a deserted village, inhabited solely by middle-class personalities who could not find their way out of the borough.

It was in the second inning and, according to word which trickled in over the beer taps, Destiny's dopes had one out and three on. The word was that the Braves' infield was playing deep.

"A set-up for a bunt," the bartender said and paused in his drawing. "A bunt means a run."

We waited, hunched over the rye and ginger ale. Higbe hit into a double play. Three out.

"That Durocher is a bum," the bartender announced. "He shoulda ordered a bunt."

Opinion Changes

It wasn't until the seventh inning, when Dixie Walker observed his birthday by rapping out a triple, scoring three runs, that this impression was dispelled. Then everybody in Joe's bar and grill (boisterous, indecent and profane talking prohibited) agreed (ladies not served at the bar) that Durocher had handled the situation well.

No one offered to heave a bar stool through the plate glass window to emphasize a point. To signal the end of the game, and victory, there was only the sound of a beer mug thumping on the bar. Word of the Cardinals' victory was accepted with a smile of assurance. Everyone talked of a mysterious "combination of three" which will assure the Dodgers victory, no matter what the Cards accomplish.

Brooklyn, briefly, is overconfident. Its pigeons have always been pompous, but everyone in the borough now struts and coos. On the plaza before Borough Hall a man announced that "in Argentina I have seen the beef fed to the peegs because they could not get the right price" and not a man would deny that pigs eat beef. Brooklyn is not what it was.

Could Be an Anticlimax

Within a pop bottle's throw of Ebbets Field is the Saddle Inn, a little outpost at the subway's end, where a man can get a beer and find out how it goes in the eighth inning. Today its sole occupants were a house painter who seemed to have private troubles and an adolescent who did not know who was pitching for Boston, nor seemed to care.

The World's Series may provide an anti-climax of hysteria. At the moment Brooklyn lives in a dream world, where all is rose-tinted peace, where all things are viewed from the crest of the wave, where a baseball team on the verge of victory has already been immortalized in wax and the actual pennant will seem but a feeble acknowledgment.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The boos on that December afternoon last year when the announcer blaired that "season tickets for the Redskins' 1941 games are now on sale," as boos go, were probably the champion in Griffith Stadium history. The Redskins had just passed the 49-0 mark in their 73-0 massacre by the Chicago Bears. The folks were in no mood for any more Redskin sales talk.

POVICH

To the ill-timed announcement, which was the worst bit of showmanship ever to hit the stadium, the fans gave full-throated sarcasm. The Redskins had just let them down with a horrible thud. Asking them to buy tickets for the next season was rubbing it in. By that time, in the third quarter, there were mean tempers in the stands among the disillusioned 38,000. They would cheerfully have given the Redskins back to the Indians, or anybody who would have 'em. Anything to get them out of sight.

And now look what has happened. December disgust didn't last long. Washington's pro football fans, in the most amazing reaffirmation of faith ever witnessed in any sport, have been mobbing the Redskins' front office for months to buy up the season tickets they sneered at in December. They have paid in $150,000 for season tickets and would have bought more had the sale not been stopped. Location hasn't meant much. The fan with seats behind the goal posts considers himself lucky.

Two Sides to That Rout by the Bears

It has been the most emphatic demonstration that pro football is here to stay, if that were ever doubted. Like Hitler, the Redskins may be disliked, but they can't be ignored. They move in important circles and keep famous company. And in the past they have been fine ball clubs. There is always the suspicion that the Redskins will bounce back, and when they do, the Washington football-going public wants to be in on it.

Among that mob in Griffith Stadium last December were philosophical fans, too, who did not condemn the Redskins. They may have been men who had played football themselves and who know that the last half dozen touchdowns in a 73-0 game can come cheaply, what with the losing team gambling and the pressure being off the winners. After the first four touchdowns, the score was no accurate index of the strength of the Redskins and Bears.

The best comment heard by this department was by the fan who was not completely unhappy at the 73-0 rout. "I wanted to see the Redskins win," he said, "but as long as the Bears won by 73-0, I feel repaid. I don't feel gypped. I saw something historic today, the biggest upset in all football history which will probably never be equalled. In future years, when that game is still making talk, I can always say rather proudly that I was there and saw it. It's something I can tell my children about."

There Was Jim Dandy, and Braddock

There can be a sort of pride-taking by those who saw that game. They were actually sitting in on something historic, much as were those fortunate 1800 fans at Griffith Stadium on an August day in 1907 when a gangling lad, from Idaho pitched his first big league ball game and lost it. Baseball fans will tell you with special pride that they saw a Walter Johnson "pitch his first game."

We can think of no bigger upset than that 73-0 game, and we are mindful of the day that the one-eyed horse, Jim Dandy, won the Travers Stakes at Belmont at 100 to 1, in a three-horse field, and the night that Jimmy Braddock, a WPA worker on the docks a few months before, lifted Max Baer's world heavyweight crown. If the Yankees lose the World Series in four straight games, that won't compare with the Redskins' 73-0 beating as an amazing spectacle.

Just three weeks before the Bears scored those 11 touchdowns while holding the Redskins scoreless, the Redskins had beaten the same Chicago club, 7 to 3. And it was no fluke. The Redskins had beaten the Bears solidly that day, yielding not a single touchdown. Anybody who ventured that, three weeks later, the Bears would score as many as four touchdowns would have been a candidate for the violent ward. Yet the Bears reeled off 11.

The Redskins meet up with the Bears again this year, at Chicago, and there will be more evidence that the flavor of one football game doesn't exactly last. On that October afternoon when they do meet, everybody will know that the Bears beat the Redskins 73-0 last time out, but the odds against the Redskins will be no more than 2 to 1, nevertheless. As long as a football takes those funny bounces, things like a Redskin victory over the Bears this year can happen without astounding too many people.

Reds Clinch Third Place by Downing Chicago Cubs, 2 to 0

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 24.—The 1940 world champion Cincinnati Reds sewed up third place in the National League pennant race today, Bucky Walters blanking Chicago, 2 to 0, for his nineteenth victory of the year as St. Louis crowded Pittsburgh out of the running.

Walters was "hot," but no more so than two rookie hurlers and a regular who shares Jimmy Wilson's mound assignment—from left to right, Lanfranconi, Kush and Vern Olsen.

The Reds, held to four hits, were away to a one-run lead in the first on a walk, a single and an outfield fly and finished their scoring in the fourth on singles by Mike McCormick and Jimmy Gleeson, plus Bernie Olsen's error. Kush and Vern Olsen hurled hitless ball through the final three frames.

Rebels 8-5 Favorites Over Hoyas Here Tomorrow Night

'2-H' Boys Give Edge To Visitors

Ole Miss Scheduled To Arrive Tonight At 7:50; Both Teams To Drill at Ball Park

By Jack Munhall

In the unfamiliar but not unfavorable role of clearcut underdog for the first time in four football seasons, Georgetown will open its 1941 campaign against Ole Miss tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium, with odds favoring a Rebel victory ranging from 8 to 5 all the way to 2 to 1.

Most places where the boys gather to risk their hard-earned bobs on the nose of the oddly bouncing pigskin, those liking Jack Hagerty's Hoyas are asking for points, at least seven points. The consensus seems to be that Harry Mehre's Ole Miss eleven and its "2-H" boys figure at least a touchdown and extra point better than the Hilltop outfit.

Only twice before since 1937 when they began the great streak that culminated in the Orange Bowl have the Hoyas been on the wrong end of the betting. Both times were last year when in the Boston College game and against Mississippi State in the Orange Bowl, the Hilltop eleven was a 7-5 underdog in most quarters.

Rebels on Spot

We say their position is not unfavorable, because for the first time since 1937, when Georgetown started a streak that carried to 22 victories and one tie in 25 scheduled games, the Hoyas will not be on the spot tomorrow night. Rather, it will be Ole Miss and Merle Hapes and Junie Hovious who will occupy the hot seat of fickle public opinion.

Arriving here tonight about 7:50 on the wave of enthusiastic press notices from both home and abroad, Ole Miss will be a bitter disappointment if it proves anything less than a super football team with a pair of super-super backfield stars, Messrs. Hapes and Hovious.

Because of such publicity, the Rebels will face the Hoyas come 8 p. m., and kick-off time with the odds of 8 to 5 or better in their favor.

Light Workouts

The Rebels will be quartered at Ambassador Hotel and immediately following registration they will don uniforms and hustle out to Griffith Statium for a workout scheduled to begin at 9 o'clock. The Rebels will take the field as soon as Georgetown finishes a practice listed for 7 o'clock sharp. Both teams will do little more than warm up and become assustomed to the lighting system and other conditions that will prevail during the actual game.

Tickets for the game will be on sale today at the Georgetown Athletic office (9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.), Griffith Stadium, Spaulding's and the Sports Center, with selling hours at the last three named being from 9 a.m. until 5. Today is the last day that high school students can take advantage of the special 25 cents admission charge.

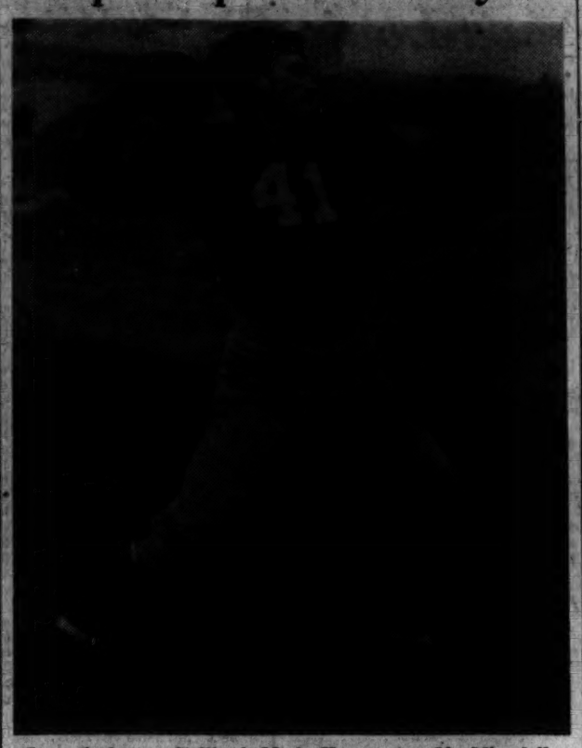
Badgers in Drill

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24.—Practice sessions for the University of Wisconsin football team were reduced to one a day as the gridders began attending school sessions today.

Coach Harry Stuhldreher reported that Bob Bauman, junior letterman tackle, had passed a condition exam and would be eligible for the coming season.

Bud Seelinger, sophomore left half, still was bothered by a knee injury and it was doubtful whether he would be ready to play against Marquette in the season's opener October 4.

Hapes Hopes to Halt Hoyas



In typical pose, Fullback Merle Hapes, star Ole Miss fullbask, practices passing for tomorrow night's game with Georgetown here at Griffith Stadium. Mr. Hapes is one-half of the famed Hapes-Hovious backfield combination. Hapes is better known as a runner, and Hovious is principally noted for his passing. However, both are proficient enough in both departments to merit Nation-wide publicity. Hapes last year compiled an offensive record statistically superior to that of All-America John Kimbrough

Fans Riot As Reeves Wins Decision

By the United Press

Cleveland, Sept. 24.—A riot broke out tonight at the Cleveland arena when hundreds of fans stormed the boxing ring in protest against a decision in favor of Jimmy Reeves, of Cleveland, in his ten-round fight with Jacob LaMotta, of New York.

LaMotta, Italian-Jewish light heavyweight boxer, smashed Reeves, Cleveland Negro, through the ropes in the final round of their bout and knocked him down for a total of five times in the round. When the decision was announced in favor of Reeves, the fans began to boo and shout at the verdict and then several ran to the ringside. Hundreds followed. The ring quickly filled with irate boxing fans and police were rushed in to quell the disorder.

Several fans surrounded Tris Speaker and Charley Bethel, Cleveland boxing commissioners, and then punches were thrown. It was not determined whether there were any arrests made or whether any one was injured.

Many persons kept storming into the ring and the police were unable to clear the ring for a half an hour after the riot started. An organist played "The Star-Spangled Banner," which quieted the rumpus for a while.

LaMotta weighed 167 pounds to Reeves' 166 in the fight and according to the United Press had the edge throughout the fight.

Huskers Rout Frosh

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 24 (AP).—The class of '45 was tossed to the Nebraska Varsity today, and three units of Cornhuskers roled over the Freshmen for 11 touchdowns in a long scrimmage.

Bell Resigns As Steelers' Head Coach

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 24.—Stung by the two defeats of the Pittsburgh Steelers in the National Pro Football League, Bert Bell, co-owner of the club, announced his resignation tonight as head coach.

BERT BELL

"Next to my wife and children, he stated, "coaching football has always been my greatest love. However, realizing that I have had better material than either Cleveland or Philadelphia and having lost both games, I believe it to be for the best interests of Pittsburgh fans that I resign and confine my duties to the business end of the corporation."

Bell's decision was announced after a conference with his partner, Arthur J. Rooney. The two said a new coach would be named within 24 hours.

Four names were mentioned for the job, Oldo (Buff) Donelli, now coach at Duquesne University; Paddy Driscoll, former coach at Marquette University; Link Lyman, for years with the Chicago Bears, and Pete Cawthorn, coach last year at Texas Tech.

Bell's resignation came on the heels of the Steelers' 10—7 setback last Sunday by the Philadelphia Eagles, a club he owned for several years before a deal last winter in which he came to Pittsburgh. The Rams beat the Steelers 17 to 14 in their opening game played at Akron.

'Skins Drop Andrako; Foes In Pass Drill

The Redskins bade farewell to American University's training field and to two-hour workouts, at least until after the Giant game, yesterday morning and today will return to Griffith Stadium for a snappy drill with the squad pared to its maximum of 33 men.

As expected, Center Steve Andrako was given his outright release yesterday and left last night for New York, where Redskin officials will attempt to place him with the Long Island Indians.

Andrako, a veteran of one year with the 'Skins, was retained when 10 others were released en route to Washington Saturday but with Ki Aldrich showing everything expected the former Ohio State captain was conceded to be with the team on borrowed time.

Wilbur Moore left the casualty list yesterday and took a few turns around the A. U. field but Jack Banta, the newcomer from Southern California, came up with a charley horse and may not be ready for the New York Giants on Sunday. Ed Justice took it easy and with Moore is expected to see service Sunday, at least for a few minutes.

Short Workouts

Coach Ray Flaherty will move the boys into Griffith Stadium this morning for the first time, with the workout to be shortened to an hour and a half. The same procedure is planned for tomorrow while Saturday's light pregame drill will be reduced to an hour.

Flaherty and Assistant Coach Turk Edwards conducted a skull drill after dinner last night which was followed by movies of last year's opener with the Giants, won by the Redskins, 21-7.

Word from New York yesterday had Giant Coach Steve Owen sending the New Yorkers through a two-hour pass drill with rookie backs Marion Pugh, Frank Reagan, George Franck and Len Eshmont tossing passes for more than an hour with Kay Eakin and Tuffy Leemans taking over for the latter part of the offensive practice.

The Giants will be without Ed Widseth, out with a broken ankle, and Howie Yeager is suffering from an infected foot, but otherwise they will be in good shape for their second league contest.

Less than 7000 seats, located in various points in the park, remain to be sold for the opener, which is virtually assured of being played to a capacity of 35,000 fans. More than 500 early birds overflowed the American University stands yesterday for the routine workout.

Pity Sgt. Brady: He Loves Them But He Jinxes 'Em

By the Associated Press

Fort Devens, Mass., Sept. 24.—It is something to be a boy in Brooklyn—like Sergt. Vincent F. Brady.

You grow up knowing the averages of every man of the Dodgers while they are still trying to teach you about the Louisiana Purchase.

Ten thousand peoples saw them do it. But not Sergt. Brady.

He could have gone. He was invited with 1000 men of the first division.

"On my last leave I see them play in New York," he told his buddies. "Four times I see them play. They drop two."

"I can't do it to them bums," he said. "Me, I'm a Jonah."

College Football Reports:

EAST:

Boston College Aims for 2d Tulane Victory

Boston, Sept. 24.—A squad of 33 Boston College football players boarded a train at 6 p. m. tonight on their way to New Orleans, where on Saturday they will try to make it two in a row over Tulane. The Eagles, making their third trip to the Louisiana city within a year, will check in for practice Friday at Bay St. Louis, Miss. They worked out there last December before their Sugar Bowl victory over Tennessee.

Time Limit Stressed

New York.—Columbia footballers aren't going to draw any penalties for failing to get the ball in play within this year's 25-second limit if Coach Lou Little can help it. The Lion mentor held a stopwatch on his first-stringers this afternoon, and stressed the value of the jump the offense can get with every second under that deadline.

Army in Tough Drill

West Point, N. Y.—A tough scrimmage under a broiling sun was the order of the day for the Army varsity, with Coach Earl Blaik apparently set on a first-string line-up at all but one position. That is the blocking back assignment, where Johnny Roberts, of Lake Bluff, Ill., has only a slim margin over Ted Michel, the converted tackle from St. Paul, and Herschel Jarrell, who hails from Van, W. Va.

Out for Revenge

Worcester, Mass.—The Holy Cross football team, which left tonight for its game with Louisiana State at Baton Rouge Saturday night, will be out to avenge two straight setbacks but may have to go into action with a big gap at center. Dick Hamilton, only seasoned pivot man, missed today's practice because of a recurrence of an old back injury. He was among the 35 players who made the trip, but Joe Yablonski, an untried sophomore, may have to play most of the game.

Brown in Light Drill

Providence, R. I.—Head Coach Skip Stahley, whose first Brown football team will make its bow against Wesleyan Saturday, stuck to his principle of no contact work throughout another long practice. By this means the former Harvard assistant hopes to have all of his men ready for action. He plans to start two sophomore halfbacks, Dan Savage and the highly-touted Henry Margarita.

Dartmouth Passing Weak

Hanover, N. H.—The Dartmouth passing attack, which worked smoothly in recent sessions, fell to pieces as Tuss McLaughry put the squad through a workout at high pressure. Chief trouble was with the receivers, who were dropping footballs right and left. Harry Gerber, on end-around plays, and Ted Arico at halfback made the ground maneuvers click.

Yale Eased Up

New Haven, Conn.—Pressure in the Yale football camp eased up as Coach Spike Nelson limited the first three teams to a half-hour scrimmage after an hour's signal drill. Bud Talbott, a junior from Dayton, Ohio, was moved up to third-team tailback in the only lineup shift.

Low Score at Cornell

Ithaca, N. Y.—Cornell's tentative varsity scored one touchdown each against the second team and the third team in an intensive scrimmage. Roy Johnson went for 20 yards on an end-around play for one tally, while Lou Bufalino's pass to Ken Stofer accounted for the other.

Navy Jayvees Use Indian Plays in Drill

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 24.—Four Navy football teams scrimmaged for two hours today against the Middy junior varsity which ran off William and Mary plays.

The junior varsity kept the pigskin throughout the session. The varsity groups experienced trouble stopping some of the stronger William and Mary plays, including spinner and pass plays.

Navy opens its season Saturday against the Virginians. Capt. Bob Froude, left end who had been on the injured list, was in uniform today, but did not participate in the practice.

Deacons Meet Duke

Wake Forest, N. C., Sept. 24 (AP).—Minor injuries kept John Polanski, back, and Frank Kapriva, guard, out of practice today as Wake Forest drilled on pass defense and on blocking ends and the secondary. The Deacons are preparing for Duke Saturday.

Clemson Tackle Shines

Clemson, S. C., Sept. 24 (AP).—An hour of defensive scrimmage for the first two teams ended Clemson's rough work today for the V. M. I. game in Lynchburg, Va., Saturday.

Stars for Gamecocks

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 24 (AP).—Stan Stasica, triple threat from Rockford, Ill., gave evidence of breaking into the South Carolina varsity as the Gamecocks prepared diligently today for the North Carolina game in Chapel Hill Saturday.

Coach Rex enright said the squad would work on pass defense tomorrow.

Two D. C. Stars Idle

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 24 (AP).—Several stars remained out of action today as North Carolina State drilled for the Davidson game Saturday night.

Zuppke Approves of Line

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 24 (AP).—After two weeks of experimenting, Illinois' grid coach, Bob Zuppke, today found what he termed a formidable line.

Zuppke promoted Bob Wilson, 202-pound guard, to the first team and indicated he would keep the combination intact for awhile. The line had Paul Milosevich and Jim McArthur at ends, Elmer Engel and Alex Agase at tackles, Wilson and Joe Pawlowski at guards and John McArthur at center.

MIDWEST:

Crisler Picks Spartans to Beat Own Team

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 24.—Yep, as you might expect, even Coach Fritz Crisler predicts Michigan State College will whip University of Michigan Saturday.

"They have almost the whole squad back this year," moaned the Michigan coach. "We're rebuilding. Last year, with Tom Harmon, we beat them by only one touchdown. This year they have at least 12 experienced backfield men. Compare that with our team."

Crisler, anticipating an aerial attack by the Spartans, worked the team largely on pass defense today.

Spartans Will Pass

East Lansing, Mich., Sept. 24.—Michigan State will take to the air with regularity in the battle with University of Michigan Saturday.

Coach Charley Bachman left no doubt of this today, announcing, "We'll do our share of the passing."

The Spartan staff ordered a halt to scrimmage for the remainder of the week, lest more injuries beset the team, and began polishing off for the Ann Arbor invasion. The workout included an intensive review of Michigan and State formations, a passing drill and a long signal drill.

Kansas State Rolls

Manhattan, Kans., Sept. 24.—Kansas State gridders ripped great holes in a picked freshman football line today. Max Timmons, husky blocking back, may not play against Fort Hays State Saturday because of an ankle injury.

Injured Sooner Ready

Norman, Okla., Sept. 24.—Trainer Ted Owen said today Mitch Shadid, aggressive little Sooner guard who sprained an ankle, would be able to play against the Oklahoma Aggies Saturday.

Clovis Pierce, top-notch sophomore tackle, obtained a release from his Army enlistment and worked out for the first time.

Carrideo Rides Again

Iowa City, Iowa, Sept. 24.—Two former college football greats now helping coach the university of Iowa—Frank Corideo, of Notre Dame, and Nile Kinnick, of Iowa—teamed up on passing today using Drake University plays and clicked against the Hawkeyes' varsity.

Iowa and Drake tangle next Saturday in the opening game of the season for the Big Ten school and most of the practice session was given to defensive work against Bulldog plays.

Tigers Set for Rain

3 Sophomores Start for Terps Against Tigers

Three sophomores will be in Maryland's starting backfield Saturday when the Terrapins open their football season against Hampden-Sydney at College Park.

Making the Terps' backfield one of the youngest of any major college, newcomers Jack Wright, fullback, and Halfbacks Tommy Mont and George Barnes have won regular positions.

Barnes, former Western High School star, will be the only Washington boy, in the opening Maryland lineup, which will include a fourth sophomore, Bob James at end.

Wright, a thick-wristed, heavy-shouldered 200-pounder from Baltimore City College High School, has looked in practice to be Maryland's greatest fullback since Jarrin' Jim Meade, who departed the College Park campus in 1938.

Only veteran in the first Maryland backfield will be Bernie Ulman, senior blocking back.

Lucky Strike Wins in Rout

With four quintets winning all three games from opponents, the Men's District League went into its third session last night with Lucky Strike, Penn, Hi-Skor and Clarendon setting a pace that mowed down all opposition.

Hokie Smith and his Lucky Strike team scored a decisive sweep over Astor Clarke and his Lafayette boys with Smith himself again leading the the way with a 425 set and "Bub" Guethler close behind with a 390 effort. Ernie Burkhalter's 390 was the best the losers could muster, with both Clarke and Ernie Hauser falling down with sets of 338 and 315, respectively. Henry Hiser's Bethesdans played host to Penn and Abe Weinberg and George Roberts combined a 376 and 373 to down them in all three tilts. Chet Lindstrom topped the losers with his 379 set.

Big Gene Hargett, who has been consistent with his 400 sets, again came through at Clarendon and posted 165-452 to lead the way, his set count a season high by one stick. Brothers Lou and Joe Freschi had identical 382s in helping in the sweep over Peacock's Bethesda boys. Hi-Skor whitewashed Rosslyn at the downtown alleys and continued their big counting with high game and set of 657 and 1899, respectively.

Rudy Dusek Seeks to Halt Fraley's Streak on Mat Tonight

Rudy Dusek, the rowdy member of the famous Nebraska "Riot Squad" of wrestledom, will attempt to cut short Pat Fraley's reign as a headliner tonight at Turner's Arena in their one-hour time-limit match.

Only one person thus far—Joe Cox—has been able to subdue Patrick in ten jousts, but in return Fraley scored two victories over the Kansan, his latest last week at the Arena via disqualification.

The veteran Rudy is still the magnet for large wrestling gates throughout the East. He claims to be the first to put the well-known "oomph" into the game when Jim Londos was coming along as champion a decade ago.

Fraley's fancy wrestling has caught on locally. His Australian leglock and crotch have proven the downfall of six of his opponents.

A two-man team match finds Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain, as a partner of Paul Boesch, of Long Beach, N. Y., against Big Jim Henry (The Green Hornet) and Milo Steinborn, the "Strong Man."

Len Macaluso, former Colgate All-American, will tackle Angelo Leone, and Emil Dusek will engage Herbie Freeman. First bout is at 8:30.

8000 Watch Keiper Ride Strong Race

3-Year-Old Escapes Early Pocket, Beats Here Goes, Pays $6.50; Sir Alfred 3d

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 24.—Ball Player, a 3-year-old son of Strolling Player, hit a turf home run today in winning the Wood-Holme Handicap, featuring the Wednesday program here on the banks of the Susquehanna River. Racing in the colors of the Tall Trees Stable, Ball Player was excellently handled by Paul Keiper, leading jockey at the meeting. He gave the gelding a bang-up ride to bring him home a half-length in advance of B. F. Christmas' Here Goes. Four lengths farther back came E. G. Hackney's Sir Alfred to be third in a starting group of five.

Those in the crowd of 8000 who could find a hunch in the name Ball Player, collected at the rate of $6.50 for each $2 investment. The winner registered time of 1:47 3-5 over a fast track and under summer-like skies.

With a less courageous boy, Ball Player would have lost his chance in the opening furlong. Going to the first turn the gelding was jammed between Saguenay II and Sir Alfred with Here Goes on the outside. Keiper refused to be bulled out of his position, however, and Ball Player took command on the swing away from the clubhouse. Here Goes then moved up on the outside.

Head and Head

Along the backstretch, Ball Player and Here Goes, the latter ridden by Jockey Danny Scocca, ran head and head with first one and then the other taking a slight advantage. Ball Player saved all the ground. In the stretch drive, Keiper shook up the Strolling Player gelding and he responded along the rail to be drawing out on his rival at the end. Sir Alfred just got up to take third money in a photo with Saguenay II.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GUERRILLA, $4.40, $3.00, $2.80; BETTER HALF, $8.00, $4.90; AGNES KNIGHT, $3.80.

GUERRILLA took command at the first turn under hustling tactics, was under clever rating, disposed of LOOKFORME at the half-mile pole and drew clear again while in hand. BETTER HALF lacked speed early, lost ground while moving and closed with good courage. AGNES KNIGHT dropped far out of it early, went wide in the stretch and closed with a rush. SUNNY ROSE weakened after moving nearest the leader in the stretch turn.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:34. Off at 2:34½. Winner, H. D. Mosteller's br. g. †A. S. Bowman-R. Hutchinson, Jr., entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUCKLE UP, $13.50, $6.50, $3.80; LEGAL LIGHT, $5.10, $2.80; MISS HAPPY, $3.80.

BUCKLE UP was sent through on the rail to reach the front in the first eighth, was well handled while showing the way and was going away through the last eighth. LEGAL LIGHT followed the pace of the leader, but was not good enough. MISS HAPPY was in close quarters on the rail and weakened in the stretch. PANTHER CREEK lacked early speed and was going well at the end. CHALLANTE was through when unable to outrun the field.

Daily Double—GUERRILLA and BUCKLE UP Paid $42.90

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1000; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:02. Winner, E. G. Hackney's b. f. (3), by Alfred the Great—Dominant. Trained by S. Bonifaco. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅘.

†E. K. Bryson-J. Shouse entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHE DAST, $3.50, $2.70, $2.50; PRINCE GOVANS, $5.10, $4.10; SCARLET BOW, $6.10.

SHE DAST took command at once, drew out to a good lead and was never threatened. PRINCE GOVANS came well at the end after lacking speed for a half. SCARLET BOW was slow to get under way and closed willingly. QUEENS DELIGHT chased the winner until inside the eighth pole and then folded up.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:31½. Winner, Mrs. D. K. Kerr's br. g. (4), by Prince of Wales—Port Weather. Trained by D. K. Kerr. Value to winner, $770; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅕.

SLOW MOTION	(Howell)	113	5	5	5	5	5	5	5	1.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PORT WALES, $10.00, $4.10, $3.00; FOGOSO, $4.90, $3.20; FLAMING HIGH, $3.70.

PORT WALES moved by FLAMING HIGH after he had taken the lead in the first eighth, opened daylight, was rated while in front and held on well under pressure. FOGOSO made several moves, but was allowed to go wide on the stretch turn. FLAMING HIGH saved ground from the start, but was not good enough. WISBECH could never threaten. SLOW MOTION was hit leaving the gate and was a trailer.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500; handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:01. Winner, Tall Trees Stable's ch. g. (3), by Strolling Player—Halicore. Trained by L. O'Donnell. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

RANGER II	(Remerscheid)	102	5	5	5	4½	5	5	5	8.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALL PLAYER, $6.50, $3.40, $2.70; HERE GOES, $4.60, $3.10; SIR ALFRED, $2.70.

BALL PLAYER, strongly handled from the start, saved ground while setting and forcing the pace with HERE GOES and responded to urging to dispose of HERE GOES in the final sixteenth. The latter went up on the outside to run with the ultimate winner, was strongly handled, but was tiring at the close. SIR ALFRED was well placed early and tired gradually. SAGUENAY II tired.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1500; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:31½. Winner, Christiana Stable's b. c. (3), by Stimulus—On Call. Trained by J. A. Healey. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:44⅘.

SWYNSTAN	(Berg)	109	5	6	5½	6	6	6	6	18.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ICE WATER, $9.70, $4.40, $3.20; CHALLOMINE, $3.80, $2.90; BOREALE, $4.40.

ICE WATER, always within striking distance, responded to pressure in the stretch and was up in the concluding strides. CHALLOMINE was shuffled back to last place at the first turn, went through on the rail to reach the leader, took a slight lead in the stretch, fought it out willingly, but could not resist the winner. BOREALE chased leader for three-quarters, held on well to the end, but could not match strides with the top ones in the last sixteenth. DAILY TROUBLE was in tight quarters while trying to move down the backstretch, went wide in the stretch and then came willingly at the end.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01. Winner, C. E. Nelson's dk. b. or br. f. (4), by Peace Chance—Lodina. Trained by P. Brady. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOODVALE LASS, $12.50, $5.90, $4.30; ZOSTERA, $3.90, $3.10; GENTLE SAVAGE, $3.20.

WOODVALE LASS was well rated, moved to the outside of the leaders entering the stretch and gradually wore the leader down to draw clear at the end. ZOSTERA moved with a rush to take command nearing the quarter pole, but could not resist the winner when challenged. GENTLE SAVAGE was in close quarters on the stretch turn and came well when clear. BOGERT tired after chasing ARGELLA for a half.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:32. Off at 5:32½. Winner, W. W. Vaughan's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANSTING, $9.40, $4.00, $3.50; CONNIE PLAUT, $3.00, $2.80; JOHN ADAM, $4.90.

CANSTING took command after a half, opened a long lead and held on well under punishment. CONNIE PLAUT was allowed to drop too far out of it, was bothered after a half, moved on the outside all the way, bore out, but was gaining again when straightened out. JOHN ADAM ran in spots and showed a good race. BOUNDING COUNT was within striking distance from the start, but would not respond to urging. CHERRY'S CHILD moved up gradually, but faltered in the last eighth.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

One of the most important candidates for the $15,000 added Havre de Grace Handicap got in yesterday to fulfill his engagement in the weekend feature. He was Arnold's Hanger's Dit, a 4-year-old son of Transmute and Ingrid. Dit, which is handled by the veteran Max Hirsch, has been postward but six times this year, one start being his victory in the $10,000 added Sussex Handicap at Delaware Park. In his last appearance under colors he was second to Fenelon and in the race he beat such good performers as Your Chance, Attention, Corydon and Devil's Crag. He has finished out of the money only once this year. Dit is scheduled to carry 113 pounds, including Jockey Carroll Bierman, contract rider for Max Hirsch. Jockey George Woolf, who returned here yesterday after riding Contradiction in New York, had a good word for both Alsab and Requested. He said that either of them would be a cinch in Saturday's Futurity. Neither of the youngsters were made eligible for the race. Woolf, who had been planning to ride in New York Saturday and then take a plane down here in time to ride in the Havre de Grace Handicap, states at present there is very little chance of the arrangement being made. Charlie McLennan, race secretary here, agreed to run his feature as the seventh race in order to give Woolf time to make the trip, but Vanderbilt has not yet agreed to card the Futurity as the fifth race on the Belmont program. Eddie Brennan, a recent arrival from the Fair Grounds, New Orleans, announced that J. Donald Hay had been made mutuel manager at the winter meeting to be held there. Hay is, as we all know, well qualified for this job. He fills the same capacity at Charles Town, Hagerstown, Cumberland, Marlboro and Bowie on the Maryland circuit, and at present he is in charge of the wagering at the Pascoag, R. I., meeting. The more meetings Hay gets, the better we'll like it. He's a nice fellow and deserves al the breaks he's getting. The stewards have notified Charlie McLennan to refuse the further entry of the erratic Autumnquest. The mare has always been one of the worst post actors around and only Tuesday she broke through the gate twice before the start, the first time going off for seven-eighths of a mile. BILL.

First Race—PERLETTE has two clever sprint efforts here and has always preferred a route. If a rider can keep her in at turns, I see no reason for her to lose. LEVENA was a clever winner last out and must be given a chance. ROSE ANITA always gives a good account of herself.

Second Race—BARBARA CHILDS was far back in her last race but she was the victim of poor racing luck and, with an equal break, I believe she will be tough to beat. JEZARA was a disappointing favorite last out and may do better here. COLLEGE WIDOW is due for a good race.

Third Race—HEATHTOWN was sent a mile and 70 yards last out and at one stage, held as much as an eight-length lead. Given this shorter route, I believe she will take the pot. WIRE TAPPER has a good race here and should be placed no worse than second. BASILEUS beat a cheaper field.

Fourth Race—HIGH COMMAND was a good third out and is taking five pounds off that effort. Given an energetic ride, I believe this may prove the right one. BL

Joe Louis Still Looks the Part of Champion in Daily Drills

Titleholder Aims to Keep Heavy Crown

Louis Shows No Signs of Slipping As He Pounds Three Sparmates

By the Associated Press

Greenwood Lake, N. Y., Sept. 24.—It may not be the old Joe Louis in training up here in the Ramapo Hills, but is a reasonbale enough facsimile thereof so you won't be mistaking him for Mickey Mouse or a candidate for the old man's home.

To this observer, who has been in every one of the bomber's camps for more than three years, the Joe Louis getting ready for his date in the Polo Grounds with Lou Nova next Monday night comes closer to being the blaster of his second fight with Max Schmeling than he has been at any time since.

He hasn't slipped any more than a skid chain in a sand pile, and as witness of it, he has an assortment of sparring partners who are thinking of applying to Joe's managers for workmen's compensation for their injuries when this training siege winds up Saturday.

As for the gossip that since Louis is due to fight for Uncle Sam for a while, starting next month, he might "loan" Nova the title—well, from the way Joe feels about it, those folks "don't know nuthin' at all."

"It's gona be awful nice going into the Army as champ," he said today after cuffing sparmates Babe Ritchie, George Fitch and old reliable George Nicholson around for four rounds. "I wouldn't wanna pass that up. And you can write it right down—that's just what I'm gonna be when I put on that uniform—the champ."

Joe's mental attitude is far superior to what it was for his early summer fight with Billy Conn. He feels this is the big one and he wants to win it. His marital difficulties are straightened out and he is set for his Army physical examination in mid-October.

While he made no prediction as to how long he figures it will take him to finish Nova in this ninth defense of his title, the Bomber passed out one crack which shows he expects a major collision in the Polo Grounds ring along about 10 p. m. Monday.

"I hear Nova's gonna carry the fight to me, even though his manager and trainer want him to wait," he remarked. "Well, I'll be movin' in, too. That means we'll both be comin'. So we're gonna have some fun."

And the way he said it, you got the idea that he meant he will have all the laughs out of the situation.

Nats Lose Twice To Red Sox Here

of the ball and the play at first was close, but Umpire Grieve said Williams was safe. Lucky for Williams Grieve did, else Williams wouldn't be hitting .400 as of this instant.

The second game was a sort of tough one for young Mulligan to lose after the Nats had wiped out Boston's 3-to-0 lead and moved in front, 4 to 3, in the sixth. Dom DiMaggio's double to left and Finney's single to center scored the tying run in the seventh and in the eighth Jim Tabor was Mulligan's villain of the piece.

Tabor started the eighth with a hit that a better third baseman than Layne would have fielded, and stole second. After Jimmy Foxx popped out, Tabor stole second, Doerr scored him with a single to left.

Back in the fourth inning, the Sox had come up with three runs with the help of Jimmy Bloodworth's muff of a ground ball. Bloodworth atoned for that error somewhat by driving in a run with a single in the sixth that put the Nats ahead, 4-3. Thereafter, however, Newsome shut the Nats out.

In the first game, the Red Sox came up with two cheap runs in the second inning after two were out. Bobby Doerr attempted to get his bat out of the way of an inside pitch, and heard the ball hit it. A fluke double to right resulted, one run scored, and when Ortiz's throw to the infield was wild, Doerr himself circled the bases.

Leonard was in trouble in the seventh before DiMaggio hit his homer. Flair and Doerr led off with singles and the bases were filled when Layne muffed Peacock's grounder. Wagner attempted a squeeze play and Vernon threw the ball wild to third, one run scoring. With nobody as yet out, DiMaggio worked Leonard to a 3-and-2 count and then slugged a low fast pitch into the left field bleachers low and fast.

Browns Beat Tigers, Tie For 6th Place

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 24.—Buck Newsom held the Browns hitless the first three innings today, then lost his magic and St. Louis defeated Detroit, 3 to 1.

In the fourth three singles produced one run for the Browns, Roy Cullenbine's driving in the tally. The bases were filled as Newsom walked Chet Laabs and the Browns scored again as Johnny Berardino walked forcing in Harlond Clift.

That was enough to win but Pitcher Bob Harris singled in tripling Rick Ferrell for an extra run in the seventh.

The victory, coupled with a double defeat of Washington by second-place Boston, lifted the Browns into a tie for sixth with the Senators. Since Cleveland also lost, the Tigers held fourth place by a half game.

Last year's American League champs scored in the second inning on Rudy York's single and Billy Sullivan's double.

Two Games Open League Semifinal

A Rockville-Carr Brothers and a Kavakos-Standard Linen game will open the semifinals of the Metropolitan Invitational Softball Tournament at Washington Softball Stadium tonight. The Rockville-Carr Brothers contest will be called by Umpire Buck Davidson at 7:30.

Tonight's four teams are all that is left of a field of 13 which started September 8. Two defeats mean elimination and the winner will receive a trip to the Redskins-Dodgers game in Brooklyn November 9, with the runner-up participating in a Kavakos steak dinner.

Gophers Workout At Miles City

Miles City, Mont., Sept. 24 (AP).—The Minnesota football squad, en route by special train to Seattle to play the University of Washington, stopped at this Eastern Montana city this morning and took a brief workout.

The players just missed a heavy rain but ran into a cold snap. The players drilled at Custer County High School and had a blackboard session. Coach Bernie Bierman stood by his lineups of the last 10 days during the drill.

DiMag's Two Homers Help Yanks Win

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 24.—Joe DiMaggio, getting up steam for the world series, hit two home runs today to lead the New York Yankees to a 7-to-2 conquest of the Philadelphia Athletics.

They were his second and third in two days and brought his season total to 30. They also gave the Yankees three outfielders each of whom has hit 30 or more round-trippers. The injured Charley Keller previously had collected 33 and Tom Henrich 31.

Catcher Ken Silvestri also hit a homer today and the Yanks rolled up a total of 11 hits to swamp the A's, who were held to six safeties by Atley Donald. One was a circuit clout by Rookie Elmer Valo.

Mt. St. Mary's Pits Star Soph Against G. W.

George Washington will have to halt a sensational new Mount St. Mary's back Saturday if it hopes to avert a repetition of last year's winning but hard-fought game with the little Emmitsburg, Md., school.

The Mounts' new backfield threat is Sophomore Gene Fuhrman, who, subbing for an injured back, Bob Hall, starred last Saturday as his team opened up with a 6-to-0 victory over Potomac State. Young Fuhrman entered the game in the third period and scored the game's only touchdown on an end run.

Coach "Bull" Draper was so enthusiastic over Fuhrman's performance against Potomac State that he promised the kid a starting chance at right half against the Colonials Saturday at Griffith Stadium.

Otherwise the Mounts' line-up is expected to be the same that opened up against Potomac State, with Compers and Rogan, ends; O'Connor and James, tackles; Topper and James, guards; Clark, center; Ellis, quarterback; Lawless, left half, and Flaherty, fullback.

Last year the Mounts, despite being badly outweighed and outmanned, held the Colonials scoreless in the first half and lost, 12-0, only after being worn down to the point of exhaustion.

Lorraine Gulli Tops District Ladies' Bowling

Lorraine Gulli rolled the only set over the 357 mark as Ladies District League bowling continued last night on seven fronts. Miss Gulli had 377 for Hi-Skor, which won two from King Pin.

Three tied with 357s for second high, Anetta Behan, with Rendezvous, which took two from Convention Hall; Anna Daug, for Clarendon, which shut out Del Ray, 3 to 0, and Ruth McClintic, whose Arlington teammates lost the odd one to Ice Palace.

Other results: Spillway, 2 to 1, scored over Lafayette, Rosslyn the same margin over Arcadia, and Red Circle sweeping the odd set from Brookland.

Mighty Phils Edged Twice By Giants

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—The New York Giants clinched fifth place in the National League today by sweeping a double-header from the Phillies, 4 to 1 and 2 to 0, with Tom Sunkel pitching two-hit ball in the nightcap.

Sunkel, who spent the season at Syracuse in the International League had another no-hitter for seven innings today, but gave up singles in the eighth and ninth. He fanned 12 and walked 6.

The veteran Hal Schumacher hurled a steady seven-hit game in the opener, which the Giants bagged with a five-hit, three-run assault against Si Johnson in the first inning.

The Giants have won 72 and lost 78, and played a tie with St. Louis, leaving three games to go. The Chicago Cubs already have lost 82.

Walper Beats Shorey, 2 Up, At Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Sept. 24.—Leo Walper, the Washington driving range professional, defeated Medalist Mel Shorey, the Indian Spring pro, in the first round of match play in the Baltimore Match Play Open today at Green Spring Valley and was the lone District entry in the quarter-finals.

Shorey won the medal with a pair of 36s for an even par 72 in the morning qualifying round but he lost, 2 up, on the eighteenth to Walper, who qualified with a 76.

Bob Barnett, the other District qualifier, was beaten by Amateur Fred Greiner, 2 and 1, in the first round. Barnett, Chevy Chase Club pro, also qualified with a 76.

Tomorrow morning's quarter-finals will find Walper against Johnny Bass, Clifton Park pro; Eddie Johnston, C. C. of Maryland amateur and second low qualifier with a 73, vs. Alec Taylor, Rolling Road pro; Andy Gibson, defending champion from Bonnie View, against Fred Greiner and Leo Silva, Woodholme, vs. Ralph Beach, Suburban. Beach defeated host Pro Leo Kernan with a 2-under-par 70 in the first round.

Lee Allows 2 Hits to Beat Indians, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 24.—Thornton Lee pitched a two-hitter today while the Chicago White Sox defeated the Cleveland Indians, 2 to 1.

Lee outlasted Jim Bagby in a duel which found the White Sox making only six hits off the Indians' right-hander. The Indians scored their only run in the fourth inning, when Ken Keltner lifted his twenty-third homer of the season into the left-field stand.

The only other hit off Lee was Gee Walker's double to left in the seventh inning. Keltner was the only Cleveland player to reach third base.

Mrs. Davy's 83 Takes Lead at Baltimore

Defending Champion D. C. Woman Paces Three-Day Maryland State Medal Play

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 24.—The defending champion, Mrs. Myron Davy, of Washington, shot an 83 today at Rolling Road Golf Club to take the lead in the three-day Maryland State Medal Championship.

A small but expert field of Washington and Baltimore women golfers is competing for the Mrs. Ralph W. Payne Trophy, which, incidentally was donated by Mrs. Davy who won it herself in 1940 the first year the cup was in competition.

Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, of Baltimore, was in second place, carding on 85 in the first 18-hole test. Rounds of 18 will be played tomorrow and Friday. The Payne Trophy is awarded on a 54-hole, three-day total gross score.

There also is a prize for the 54-hole net score, with three sharing first-day honors by firing 78s. They are Mrs. C. A. Hill, 92—14—78, and Mrs. A. A. Morrell, 94—16—78, both Washington, and Mrs. Harry C. Trace, 87—9—78, Baltimore.

Mrs. Trace's 87 gave her third in the Payne Trophy competition, with Mrs. L. G. Pray, Washington, 88, fourth, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, Washington, 89, fifth.

Shooting six pars on the first nine, Mrs. Davy whose handicap is one, got a 42. She then came in one better with a 41 on two birdies and three pars.

Other scores today included, Mrs. W. H. Stokes, Washington, 92; Mrs. F. J. Godfrey, Washington, 92; Mrs. H. J. Beech, Washington, 93; Mrs. Maurice Glick, Baltimore, 94; Mrs. B. D. Gamble, Washington, 97; Mrs. G. P. Hopkins, Baltimore, 98; Mrs. J. W. Sheridan, Baltimore, 99; Miss Gladys Greiner, Baltimore, 100; Mrs. J. T. Powell, Washington, 101, and Mrs. H. A. Paddock, Baltimore, 102.

Congressional Golf May Draw Star Players

Ted Bishop, this year's National Amateur semifinalist from Boston and Frankie Strafaci, best of the famous golfing family from New York, may be here for the Congressional Country Club Invitation tournament next week if efforts of the pro shop pan out.

Wiffy Cox, the host pro who made Strafaci a national figure, has written his protege asking him to be on hand if possible while Jocko Miller, a life-long friend of Bishop, wired the lanky New England champion details of the tournament and extended a personal invitation.

Meanwhile entries to all prominent amateurs in Maryland, the District and many in Virginia have gone out for the tournament which will run Wednesday through Friday of next week. George Voight will play if business conditions permit. An invitation has also gone out to Richard Jennings, the public links champion.

Wednesday's qualifying will be followed by a Calcutta pool drawing that night at the club. Two rounds of match play will follow on Thursday with the semifinals and finals on Friday.

The winner's name will be inscribed on the President's Cup, given by Herbert Hoover. The last tournament was won by Roger Peacock.

Village Motors, Hume Springs Tens Bow in Tourney

With Joe Welles on the mound, pitching one-hit ball, Jacobsen Florists hung up their fourth victory in the Metropolitan Sandlot Baseball Tournament at Ballston Stadium last night at the expense of Hume Springs, 10 to 2. The victory advanced the Florists to the fourth round and eliminated the Alexandrians from the tourney.

Village Motors, pre-tourney favorite, was eliminated in the night-cap by Petworth Citizens Association, 4 to 1.

Riverdale, undefeated in tournament play, takes on H. & J. Construction Co., of The Post Industrial League, in the first game of the twin bill tonight. Vienna Cardinals will attempt to stop the sensational Petworth Citizens in the nightcap.

Hotze, Smith Reach Golf Semifinals

Mrs. R. E. Hotze and Mrs. H. D. Smith pulled a pair of major upsets in the quarter-finals of the women's club championship at Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday, and moved into the semi-finals along with Mrs. H. B. Willey and Mrs. Charles Lynch.

Mrs. Hotze, three down at one time and trailing until the sixteenth hole, won the seventeenth against Mrs. Lafayette Franklin, tournament medalist, and halved the eighteenth for a 1 up victory. Mrs. Smith won over Mrs. Wilda Martin, defending champion, also on the eighteenth.

Mrs. Hotze will meet Mrs. Falls and Mrs. Smith will oppose Mrs. Lynch in today's semi-finals.

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT

Mrs. R. E. Hotze defeated Mrs. Lafayette Franklin, 1 up; Mrs. Marion Falls defeated Mrs. H. B. Willey, 5 and 3; Mrs. H. D. Smith defeated Mrs. Wilda Martin, 1 up; Mrs. Charles Lynch defeated Mrs. R. I. Bailey, 6 and 5.

SECOND FLIGHT

RailsExecuting Record Job, Fletcher Says

Cincinnati, Sept. 24 (AP).—American railroads are "doing a better job just now than ever before in the history of transportation," R. V. Fletcher, of Washington, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, declared today.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a convention of the telegraph and telephone section of the association, Fletcher said continued expansion of the defense program would raise freight traffic to levels of 1927 or even 1929.

He gave this picture of what defense activity has given railroads and their response to the emergency:

Each freight car now in service is performing 60 per cent more transportation than a similar car in 1918 and a third more than in 1929, year of heaviest traffic.

Through September 6, this year's carloading were 18 per cent greater than in the like 1940 period and 900,000 cars—most since 1930— are in use.

In the first half of this year 210,738,076,000 tons of freight were moved one mile—22 per cent more than in the first half of last year and 10 per cent above tonnage in the first half of 1930.

Operating revenues for the first seven months of 1941 on class 1 railroads totaled $2,909,870,000—a 23 per cent increase over the same 1940 period, but under the 10-year average for 1921-1930.

"It is possible that we shall emerge from the present struggle with transportaton agencies permanently in the hands of the Government, or with Government control so greatly increased that the future of the industry will no longer depend on present operators, Fletcher said.

If the industry is to continue successfully under private control, he asserted, it must improve a credit rating that "is still but a trembling shadow of former robustness."

"The market has been cold and the investing public shy to all suggestions of restored railroad credit," he said.

Republic Steel To Increase Capacity 35%

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 24.—Republic Steel Corporation's pig iron capacity will be increased 35 per cent under a program approved by the Government's Defense Plant Corporation, Republic announced today.

The schedule includes four new blast furnaces, 276 by-product coke ovens, increased sintering, concentrating and by-product capacity and expansion of iron and coal operations, together with installation of auxiliary equipment. These facilities will be owned by Defense Plant Corporation but operated by Republic Steel. Part of the program was previously announced.

Republic's present blast furnace capacity of 4,870,000 tons will be increased nearly 1,750,000 tons annually, with blast furnaces increased from 17 to 21, the steel company said. Two will be built at Cleveland and one each at Youngstown, Ohio, and Gadsden, Ala., By-product coke ovens will be increased from 786 to 1062.

Building, Loan League Plans Election Oct. 28

The first meeting since spring of the executive council of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League Tuesday at the Raleigh Hotel was marked by 100 per cent attendance.

William N. Payne, Jr., president of the league, called attention to the annual meeting and election of officers October 28 and named Edward A. McAleer, secretary of the Equitable Cooperative, R. W. Santelman, secretary of the Metropolis Building, and Edward K. Jones, secretary of the Interstate Building, to select a slate of officers and directors.

Guest speaker at the luncheon was Dr. William H. Walker, president of the First Fedreal Savings and Loan Association of Miami, Fla., who discussed the convention of the U. S. Savings and Loan League to be held in Miami. Two thousand delegates are expected, he said.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 24 (AP).—Grain futures prices tacked on net gains ranging from 1 to almost 2 cents a bushel at times today, while soybeans rose as much as 3 cents, but the advance was checked and later reversed by profit taking.

Early strength of cotton and securities stimulated buying of cereals. Traders attributed much of the market's action to renewal of bullishness because of the war and inflation talk. Some buying was credited to mills, cereal manufacturers and distillers, but the extent of this activity could not be determined. Flour business last week was on a much curtailed scale compared with previous weeks.

Despite the late reaction, wheat, which was up as much as 1¾ cents at one stage, closed ⅝ to 1 cent higher than yesterday. December 1.21⅞@1.21¼, May 1.25¾@1.25½. Corn, up a cent at the extreme, finished ½ to ⅝ higher. December 81@81½, May 86½; oats ¾ to 1⅜ higher, rye to to 1 up and soybeans ¼ to 2¼ higher. Lard, which borrowed strength from grains and cottonseed oils, closed 12 to 18 higher.

Ford to Add Heavy Tanks To Arms Work

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 24.—The Ford Motor Co. soon will add Army tanks to its defense production program, it was learned in authoritative quarters here today. Because contracts have not yet been signed, details of the undertaking were not disclosed.

It is reported, however, that initial awards will be for the medium or 30-ton size mobile fortresses, with plans also in the making for the production of much heavier units.

Ford and officers of the Army Ordnance Department as well as other high Government officials already have virtually agreed upon the location of the tank production plant, following a recent inspection of facilities at the River Rouge factory.

Accounting to present plans, Ford would undertake to build the entire vehicle, although he would subcontract work on much of the needed material, chiefly in the Detroit area.

The undertaking, according to reports in automotive quarters here, would be on a mass production scale. Exact production schedules, of course, will not be disclosed. The Chrysler tank arsenal in nearby Macomb County has a projected schedule of not less than five of the medium tanks for each eight-hour working shift.

Ford's present war contracts aggregate approximately three quarters of a billion dollars, covering orders for the production of Consolidated B-24D bomber planes and the manufacture of Pratt & Whitney aviation engines. These two undertakings also have involved a large amount of subcontracting by the Ford company.

The bomber plant under construction near Ypsilanti, Mich., is expected to be ready for occupancy around January 1, although Ford has begun preliminary training work on bomber construction in the old Ford Aircraft factory in Dearborn, where he expects to turn out a number of completed planes before the new plant is ready.

Production of the Pratt & Whitney aviation engines already is under way, along with experimental work on several other engines, designed primarily for aircraft, but including one readily adaptable to tanks.

Electric Power Output Declines

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Electric power production tapered off for the week ended September 20 from the peak made in the preceding week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Output of 3,232,192,000 kilowatt hours compared with 3,281,290,000 in the preceding week, or a decline of 1.5 per cent. In the corresponding period a year ago production was 2,789,346,000.

The decline in output was of more than seasonal proportions and the Associated Press index of electric power production dropped to 146.9 from 148.5 the previous week. A year ago the figure was 129.4.

Sugar Futures

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—World contract sugar quotations rose sharply today under the impetus of Cuban buying. The close was 4 to 5 points higher on a turnover of 34,350 tons.

Domestic sugar prices finished unchanged to 2 points higher on sales of 550 tons.

Market observers said indications were that most producers had sold their supplies available for export. No large raw sales have been reported recently, although some business has been done in export refined sugar.

Hospelhorn Addresses State Bank Supervisors

The so-called ten to one ratio is an inadequate test to measure the sufficiency of bank capital in relation to deposits, John D. Hospelhorn, deputy bank commissioner of Maryland, told the fortieth annual convention of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks in his presidential address at St. Paul, Minn., yesterday.

"A bank might have a 25 per cent ratio and yet its asset position could be so vulnerable as to make the unit decidedly unsound, and vice versa the bank could have a 6 per cent ratio and yet its assets could be of such a high quality as to indicate no risk whatsoever.

"This observation cannot help but lead us to the conclusion, therefore, that a better or sounder basis must be evolved for this part of our supervisory work. I feel that this is a very important part of our program and recommend most urgently that the Executive Committee undertake a study of this problem with the several Federal agencies, so that a sounder preface may be established for this phase of our work. I submit that sound bankable assets of good quality are a truer test for deposit protection than the present ratio policy."

Public to See 1942 Car Styles In Next 10 Days

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 24.—The public introduction of 1942 model passenger automobiles will be completed within the next 10 days.

Following closely upon Chevrolet's presentation tomorrow will come the formal introduction Saturday of Plymouth and DeSoto, with Ford and Oldsmobile to follow on October 3 and October 5, respectively. It has been said in trade circles that the slowing down of retail orders currently reported from many sections was due to the fact several makes of cars were yet to be displayed in the alesrooms. Thus the public reaction to follow the last of the 1942 models to be introduced is being awaited not only by their makers but by the sales heads of the other companies that already have had formal salesroom presentations. It is worthy of note in connection with the impending introductions that Chevrolet, Plymouth and Ford ordinarily account for approximately 65 per cent of all the motorcars produced in the United States.

Longer, Lower, More Massive

Generally, the real sales competition in the industry gets under way with the announcement of Chevrolet, Plymouth and Ford models along with their price tags. It is understood Chevrolet's price schedule will be made known coincident with the public disclosure of its 1942 features. Local dealers who are to fix Plymouth delivered prices probably will announce them with their individual presentations, in line with the new Chrysler policy, and Ford's schedules are expected along with the October 3 introductions.

All the models currently being presented in the salesrooms already have been previewed privately by the automotive writers. All have one major characteristic—they appear longer, lower and more massive than ever. The heavier appearance results largely from a somewhat similar front-end treatment that features a lower and wider radiator grille and a hood that seems to rest more deeply between the front fenders.

Into the industry-wide difference of opinion regarding prospects for a shortage of a selling job for the merchandisers through the 1942 model year, Alfred H. Ward, publisher of Ward's (Automotive) Reports, Inc., dropped the thought today that last year's tremendous buying "definitely robbed the future."

Natural Curtailment

In an address to the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Robert Morris Association, he asserted that the boom buying rate of the past year could not be expected to continue and added that production curtailment might have been a natural process, without governmental action.

He prodicted a total output of 3,610,000 vehicles for the 1942 model year, including the indicated quota of 2,150,000 passenger cars, 1,190,000 trucks and about 275,000 units of Canadian production. This would compare with an estimated 5,600,000 car and truck completions during the 1941 model year.

Nevertheless, he said, the dollar volume of the automotive companies during the 1942 model cycle probably would exceed that of 1941, due to huge banks of armament orders on which deliveries already have begun.

"This industry," he said, "could be looked upon as a three-billion-dollar business in a year such as 1941. It is difficult to see how the industry could expect to reach more than two-thirds of this figure in 1942 from automotive products alone. But a large share of more than three billion dollars in defense orders will be completed during 1942."

Postwar Hopes Cheer Commodities

By the Associated Press

Buying that followed predictions of a huge post-war demand carried most commodity futures prices upward although profit taking cut into the gains.

All grains in the Chicago market were ahead fractions to more than a cent a bushel. Soybeans climbed ¼ to 2⅛ cents and wheat ⅝ to 1 cent. Hog and lamb prices held about steady but cattle were down a shade.

New York cotton, after advancing nearly $1.50 a bale, settled back to gains of 45 to 65 cents a bale. Cottonseed oil quotations rose .07 to .12 of a cent a pound.

Santos coffee futures declined sharply, closing as much as 2/5 of a cent a pound lower after the Army rejected as too high all bids on 11,517,000 pounds.

Cuban buying lifted world quota sugar prices .04 to .06 of a cent a pound.

Wool tops futures rose .3 to .8 of a cent a pound, and hides were slightly higher.

The Associated Press index of 35 cash commodity prices advanced to 92.82 per cent of the 1926 average from 92.37 per cent the day before.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Buying overcame aburts of liquidation in the cotton futures maket today and the close was 9 to 13 points higher. Mill purchases and speculation as to the damage in Texas from the tropical storm combined with talk of post-war needs for cotton to stimulate prices. Secretary Morgenthau's testimony that the Government needed more control over farm prices brought some profit-taking.

Stock Market Runs Into Headwinds After Early Rise Led by Rails, Aircraft

New York, Sept. 24.—The stock market, running before a fair buying breeze in most of today's trading, hit last minute headwinds that tossed it about erratically.

The finish saw more declines than advances but many issues were about unchanged. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed .2 of a point lower at 43.5 after small advances earlier in the week.

The initial buoyancy seemed induced by purchases of rails and aircraft shares and these also led the turn-around. The trading pace seemed a little more brisk on the advance than in the final retreat. Turnover for the day was 551,710 shares compared with 494,060 Tuesday.

At times a scattered buying developed for some manufacturing, chemical, metal, steel and store issues.

In the bond market, where some unsettlement had been expected, especially for United States Governments, following a hike in the reserve requirements for commercial banks, there was a little dip at the start, then a turn around, which left final prices in the over-the-counter market with fair gains of the day. Corporate loans, like stocks, were mixed. Turnover in the Stock Exchange was $5,909,700, face value, compared with $5,609,600 Tuesday.

Among stock leaders, losses of fractions to a point or so were chalked up for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Sears, Douglas, Boeing, Sperry, Lockheed, Glenn Martin, American Telephone, New York Central, Anaconda, Southern Railway, Western Union, Westinghouse, and Phillip Morris. Chrysler, a leader in the early buying, closed off ½ at 58½.

Columbia Broadcasting System's special events reporters have planted their microphones in the path of the Gulf Coast hurricane, and are ready to give the coast-to-coast audiences vivid word pictures of the disaster. Tuesday, September 23, brought a lull in the great "Battle of Louisiana", war maneuvers, but when the Weather Bureau promised no lull in the weather, CBS war games reporter John Charles Daly and Bill Slocum, jr., special events director, moved their microphones to Galveston, Tex. From there they will describe the spectacular action first-hand. Eric Sevareid will continue to cover the Third "Blue Army" action from the scene of maneuvers. Maj. George Fielding Eliot, war analyst for CBS, will leave by plane from New York City tomorrow for Louisiana to participate in two special broadcasts Saturday and Sunday.

CBS correspondents made more news this week, with the announcement that Harry W. Flannery, CBS commentator in Berlin since last year, will return to the United States, leaving Lisbon on the Pan-American Clipper October 2. Howard Smith remains in Berlin for CBS. Leigh White, who formerly covered the Near East for CBS, will arrive in New York next week and plans to make several broadcasts telling of his adventures and conditions in Greece and the Near

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — First Time a Man Ever Avoided Burma — BY MILTON CANIFF

GOOD GOING, TERRY! DUDE HAS BEEN GETTING THEM FROM THE TOP WHEN I MISS THEM FROM HERE! SOME OF THE DRIVERS ARE CLIMBING OUT WITH THEIR HANDS UP!
LOOK, RAVEN! THAT RED BABY IS MAKING A BREAK FOR IT!
THERE'S A WOMAN TIED ACROSS THE WINDSHIELD FOR PROTECTION! IT'S BURMA!
I'VE BEEN WAITING FOR THIS CHANCE!
NO, RAVEN! YOU CAN'T SHOOT... YOU'LL HIT HER!
OH, CAN'T I?
NOT WHILE I'M DRIVING!
MILTON CANIFF

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

REALLY, MR. KANE, AREN'T YOU OVERSTEPPING YOUR AUTHORITY A BIT?
PERHAPS, CONNIE.. BUT I THINK IT'S VERY FOOLISH FOR YOU TO CALL ON THAT FELLOW.. AT HIS ROOMING HOUSE!
GOING TO MRS. WAGNER'S IN THE AFTERNOON TO LEAVE A BOOK ON GEOMETRY SHOULDN'T SET TONGUES WAGGING EVEN IN BOOMVILLE!
JUST THE SAME, I'M WALKING ALONG WITH YOU!
YOU ARE NOT! I.. I.. OH, WELL! .. HAVE IT YOUR WAY!
SOCIETY EDITOR
I'LL BE WITH YOU IN A MINUTE! ... WHAT IS IT, DINGBAT?
CHIEF GRIMES PHONED FROM THE POLICE STATION! WANTS TO SEE YOU, IN PERSON, RIGHT AWAY, BOSS!

MICKEY FINN — Date Off! — BY LANK LEONARD

MR. AND MRS. — Husbands Are So Obliging — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

DON'T IT SEEM KINDA FUNNY THAT KITTY SHOULD HAVE GONE OVER TO TANKSVILLE WITH THAT MRS. CUTTING TODAY—WHEN SHE KNOWS YOU'VE ONLY GOT A FEW MORE DAYS LEFT UP HERE?
MRS. CUTTING WENT OVER TO BUY SOME CLOTHES, UNCLE PHIL—AND WANTED KITTY TO HELP HER PICK 'EM OUT!
OH YEAH? A RICH WOMAN LIKE MRS. CUTTING AIN'T BUYIN' CLOTHES IN TANKSVILLE, MICHAEL! SHE JUST TOOK KITTY OVER THERE TO PUT IN A FEW DIGS ABOUT YOU!
I WOULDN'T BE SURPRISED IF YOU SAW A CHANGE IN KITTY WHEN SHE GETS BACK!
YOU CERTAINLY TALK FOOLISH AT TIMES, UNCLE PHIL! WELL—IT'S GETTING LATE AND I'M TAKING KITTY TO THE MOVIES TONIGHT! LET'S ROW IN!
I'D RATHER NOT GO TONIGHT, MICKEY—I HAVE A TERRIFIC HEADACHE!

DIXIE DUGAN — Anxiously Waiting — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

TELL THE TAXI MAN TO DRIVE SLOWLY, PLEASE, JOE
THEY ALWAYS DRIVE SLOW
CAN'T YOU OBLIGE ME AND DO AS I ASK?
OH, SURE. ONLY IT'S FOOLISH, THAT'S ALL
THERE! WHAT DID I TELL YOU?
ALL RIGHT. I KNOW WHAT YOU TOLD ME
IF YOU WON'T SPEAK, THEN I WILL. DRIVER! GO A LITTLE SLOWER, PLEASE
YES, MA'AM. MOST PEOPLE WANT TO GO FAST

I'M AWFULLY SORRY I BEHAVED SO ABOMINABLY — BY FRANK MARTINEK

I—I'M AWFULLY SORRY I BEHAVED SO ABOMINABLY LAST NIGHT, DIXIE! BUT WHEN THAT GANG OF SOCIAL SAPS LAUGHED AT BUD I WANTED TO BEAT THEM UP!
YOU ALMOST DID, DEAR!
SO HE WENT DIRECTLY TO YOUR HOME—(sigh)—DEAR BOY! I DO LOVE HIM SO—I TRIED NOT TO—BUT—
WHY STOP SOMETHING AS BEAUTIFUL AS THAT? ENCOURAGE IT—BUD HALE IS A REAL MAN—THE SALT OF THE EARTH—
—AND I'M SURE HE LOVES YOU, TOO! HE WAS GOING TO TELL ME ABOUT IT LAST NIGHT—SOMETHING PERSONAL HE SAID—BUT I'LL FIND OUT FOR SURE TONIGHT!
GOSH—I HOPE YOU'RE RIGHT!
ON THE HORN, DIXIE!
OH—GOOD MORNING, BUD! SORRY I COULDN'T WAIT TO SEE YOU AT BREAKFAST THIS MORNING! YOU WANT TO ASK ME SOMETHING? OH, YES—YES—I ALMOST FORGOT! LUNCH? O.K. AT THE GREASY FORK—BYE, NOW!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Explanation, Please — BY FRANK MARTINEK

MAGNA WON'T EVEN NOTICE WE'RE HERE. SHE MAKES THOSE DRAWINGS IN SORT OF HYPNOTIC TRANCE
GUESS SHE'S JUST FINISHED ONE. I'LL HAVE A LOOK
YOU'LL FIND IT'S VERY CRUDE, COMMANDER—LIKE THE PRIMITIVES OF EARLY TIMES
SHE'S SO UNWORLDLY, YOU SEE. COMPLETELY DETACHED FROM OUR MODERN AGE
UH-HUH. BUT IF SHE IS—
HOW COME SHE'S DRAWN A STREAMLINED TRAIN?

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

LEAVING NOW A LONELY INDIAN ON A PARK BENCH, WE PEEK IN AT THE PENTHOUSE OF PETER MIDNIGHT, PLAYBOY, WHO IS DESTINED TO HAVE A STRANGE ROLE IN WAHOO'S FUTURE!
HEEVES!
YES, MISTER MIDNIGHT!
MUST YOU LET THAT BROMO FIZZ SO LOUD? MY HEAD IS SPLITTING!
IF I MAY SAY SO, SIR—THEM AS WALTZES MUST PAY THE FIDDLER!
GAD! SO YOU TURN PHILOSOPHER ON ME, EH? VERY WELL, SOCRATES! I HEED YOUR WARNING! HENCEFORTH I SHALL GO ABOUT DOING GOOD!—A TOAST, HEEVES!—TO THE END OF A WASTREL'S LIFE!
WHAT? AGAIN, SIR!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

AS THE MYSTERY GIRL HURRIES TO WARN KING AND NELLO THAT THE WHITE ESKIMO LEADER, ITU, HAS RESOLVED TO KILL THEM, THE MOUNTIE AND LEADER UNKNOWINGLY APPROACH EACH OTHER.
SOMEHOW, I'VE GOT TO KEEP THE ESKIMOS OFF THE WAGON PATH UNTIL NELLO FINISHES BLASTING FOR HIS SEISMOGRAPH TESTS!
WHEN I KILL THE MOUNTIE AND THE LEADER OF THE OIL-HUNTERS, THEY WILL GO, THEN THE MUSK-OXEN WILL RETURN AND MY PEOPLE WILL NOT STARVE!
ITU!—I HAVE COME TO TALK!
THE TIME FOR TALK IS GONE WITH THE MUSK-OXEN THE OIL-HUNTERS DRIVE AWAY!

DONALD DUCK — The Slip Between Cup and Lip! — BY WALT DISNEY

DOGGONE IT, WHAT YOU KIDS BEEN EATING NOW?
A DOZEN... OUCH...
BANANAS UNCA...OO.. DONALD OUCH...!
THAT'S RIGHT... SEND OVER A QUART OF CASTOR OIL, AND MAKE IT SNAPPY!
